2. To mark with a star, distinguish by an affixed asterisk, as names in a list 3 To transform into a star 4. To cause to split in lines diverging from the center 5 Surg To make incisions radiating from a common center. 6. Theat To present in a play as a star

II. i 1. To act or play as a star, play the leading part said of an actor or actress sometimes in the active voice with it

Booth had been 'starring it' as his [Edmund Kean's] rival at Covent Garden
CHARLES AND MARY C CLARKE Recollections of Writers p 15 [s]

2. To shine brightly as a star; be prominent 3. [Eng] In the game of pool, to pay into the pool the sum required to purchase a life, a privilege of a player who has lost his three lives, as by pocketing his own ball Compare LIFE, 20 4. To take the form of stars in hardening as antimony star[1], n Astron 1. A luminous celestial body so distant as to appear like a luminous point in common usage including the planets, but in astronomy limited to the fixed stars, and hence sometimes applied by analogy to the sun

The number of fixed stars distinguishable to the naked eye is from four to six thousand but the largest telescopes reveal probably between 30 and 50 millions The brightness of stars is expressed by a scale of magnitudes in which the 16 brightest are called of magnitude 1, and the faintest visible to the naked eye of magnitude 6 Several hundred of the brighter stars are designated by the name of the constellation to which they belong preceded by a Greek or Roman letter or number Of these many also have special names of their own generally assigned by the Arabian astronomers, as shown in the table below Classified by their spectra stars fall under several types See STAR-TYPE, below Compare ASTEROID CONSTELLATION, PLANET.

With the development of observational astronomy the sidereal universe was arbitrarily divided into areas characterized by special assemblages of stars these assemblages were named asterisms or constellations and each received a name suggested by mythological or other figures The heavenly bodies fall into two classes (1) the fixed stars or stars proper which retain the same relative position with respect to one another and (2) the planets which have motions of a distinctly individual character, and appear to wander among the stars proper Encyc Brit 11th ed vol xxv, p 785

2 Any star-shaped or star-like object or device Specif (1) A starfish or other radiate echinoderm as a brittle-star (2) A radiate sponge-spicule an aster (3) An asterisk (4) A figure having radiating points generally five or six and properly formed by producing the sides of a regular pentagon or hexagon used as an emblem or device, as in the American flag, on the shoulder-strap of a general or in the insignia of an order (5) A white spot on the forehead of a horse or bovine animal (6) A star fort See FORT (7) A star wheel (8) Pyrotech An explosive device which bursts in the air with the appearance of a shower of stars (9) On the surface of a steel casting the flaw present when the conical end of the pipe has not been entirely machined off (10) [Eng] An extra life purchased in a game of pool (11) Elec A star connection, see under CONNECTION

3. An actor who plays the leading part, especially, one who is the main or only attraction in a company, the rest being regarded merely as his supports, hence, one who shines prominently in a calling or profession, any brilliant or prominent person, as, a literary star, an operatic star 4. Astrol A planet or other heavenly body considered as influencing nativities, fortunes, or destiny, hence, that which chances or happens

History has preserved us the story of the battle of Pharsalia, where the star of Cæsar prevailed over the star of Pompey a battle which fixed the fortunes of the world for fifteen centuries
EVERETT Orations and Speeches Bunker Hill Monument p 337, [a s co 1836]

5 Ornith A humming-bird of any of several genera, notably Oreotrochilus, a South-American mountain genus 6. Her See ESTOILE [< AS steorra, star, < root of STREW] Syn.: see ORB

—African Star, a decoration of honor See list under ORDER —binary s., see BINARY —comparison s. (Astron) any star whose position is used as a point of reference in determining the positions of comets or other celestial objects —dark s. (Astron), an invisible or dimly shining star Such stars are known only through their action upon visible stars —double s., see DOUBLE —equestrian s. (Bot) a plant of the genus Hippeastrum —fixed s. (Astron) a self-luminous celestial body far beyond the bounds of our solar system so called because such bodies preserve the same positions to ordinary observation —golden s. (Eccl), a shrine or monstrance in which the elements are exhibited at Easter —Greenwich stars (Astron), the stars regularly observed at Greenwich and used in making lunar computations and observations —hydrogen s (Astron), a star in the spectrum of which hydrogen appears to be the principal or predominant element —informed stars (Astron) scattered stars —lunar s, a star used at sea in determining longitude by comparison of its angular distance from the moon with the calculated distance for a given hour and longitude —Medicean stars (Astron), the first four satellites of Jupiter so called by Galileo their discoverer, in compliment to the Medici family, his patrons —multiple s. (Astron) a system of three or more stars which appears to the unaided eye to be but a single star —nautical stars (Astron) stars from which navigators take reckonings —nebulous s. (Astron) a star surrounded by nebulosity as if formed of nebulous material —Nile s. (Astron) the dog-star, Sirius so called because of its position in the heavens at the summer solstice, when it rose with the sun and served to give warning of the approaching rise of the Nile —north s, the pole-star Polaris —polar s, same as POLE-STAR —royal stars (Astron), Aldebaran, Antares, Fomalhaut, and Regulus as the four astrological stars —runaway s (Astron), a star moving with such rapidity that no known attraction will account for its motion —shooting s. (Astron), a small meteor having the appearance of a rapidly moving and suddenly disappearing star caused by minute particles moving through the celestial spaces and striking the atmosphere. —silicon s. (Astron) a star showing silicon as its most conspicuous spectrum-component —solar s. (Astron), a star with a spectrum like that of the sun such as Capella and Arcturus —standard s. (Astron), a star whose position is so accurately determined that it may be used as a base of calculation or comparison to determine the positions of other heavenly bodies or of points on the earth or at sea —star'an"i-mal, n A radiate especially a starfish —s. anise, n The Chinese anise (Illicium anisatum) or its star-shaped capsules The name is extended also to other species of Illicium —s. antimony, commercial antimony in cakes which shows on the upper surface crystalline patterns resembling stars or fern-leaves —s.-apple, n The fruit of a West-Indian tree (Chrysophyllum cainito), or the tree itself The edible fruit resembling an apple in size and appearance, has ten cells and as many seeds disposed stellately around the center. See CHRYSOPHYLLUM —s.-bearer, n. One of an obscure medieval order of English monks who wore a red-and-blue star as an emblem See BETHLEHEMITE —s.-belt, n Astron A series of bright stars crossing the Milky Way at an angle of about 20°. Its northern direction is indicated by the brightest stars in Taurus Perseus Cassiopeia, Cepheus, Cygnus, and Lyra —s. beryl, quartz, etc compare ASTERIA —s.-blasting, n The supposed evil influence of the stars —s. boarder [Slang] a favored boarder Compare STAR[1] n 3 —s.-bright, a Bright as or like a star —s.-buzzard, n An American goshawk (genus Asturina) —s.-capsicum, n A greenhouse species of Solanum (S capsicastrum), an ornamental undershrub from Brazil with clusters of scarlet berries —s.-catalog, n Astron A list of stars containing names positions in right ascension and declination magnitudes, and proper motions or other particulars —s.-chart, n Astron A chart giving the positions and relative sizes of stars in a section of the celestial sphere —s. clerk†, n An astronomer s. divine†. —s.-cluster, n Astron A relatively dense group of small stars sometimes of thousands a resolvable nebula See NEBULA —s. coral, any of various ebony corals of Orbicella and allied genera having round or polygonal calices which contain strongly marked radiating septa —s.-count, n Astron The aggregation of stars as seen by a given telescope at one position or the aggregate of stars of each magnitude —s.-craft†, n Astrological skill astrology —s.-crossed, a Unfortunate astrologically ill-fated ill-starred star'-cross"t —s disk (Astron), same as SPURIOUS DISK —s.-drift, n Astron A common proper motion of stars in the same region of the heavens noticed in close groups of stars like the Pleiades and in pairs of widely separated stars —s. dust, n 1. Same as COSMIC DUST See COSMIC 2. Astron Innumerable minute stars looking like dust-particles in a powerful telescope —s.-feed, n A device upon the end of the slide-rest screw of a lathe by which it is made to cross-feed automatically —s.-finder, n Astron. A de-steam, n 1. Water in the form of vapor, aqueous vapor, especially, the gas into which water is changed by boiling transparent until it begins to condense Water changes into aqueous vapor by surface evaporation at all temperatures, but the vapor is not commonly called steam till it is produced in the body of the liquid by ebullition The temperature at which this takes place increases with the pressure at ordinary atmospheric pressure it is 100° C or 212° F The temperature is influenced also by impurities in the water and by the substance of the containing vessel When ebullition begins the water remains at the same temperature, all the heat applied being employed in doing molecular work in changing water into steam This fact is expressed in ordinary language by saying that the heat becomes latent in the steam On condensation the heat reappears Till the moment when all the water is turned into steam, the latter is said to be saturated If heated still more, its temperature rises and the steam is said to be superheated (See phrases below) Steam is the most economical agent known for use in engines, on account of its great latent heat, coefficient of expansion and facility of condensation (See ENGINE STEAM-ENGINE) It is used largely for heating, chiefly for warming buildings but also for cooking, and in various manufactures as in brewing Steam is used as the first element of many compound words which are self-explaining in the sense of operated by steam-power as, steam-brake, s-capstan, s-crane, s-dredger, s-excavator, s-hoist, s-launch, s-packet, s-turbine, s-tug, s-vessel, s.-wagon, s.-winch, s-whistle, s-yacht.

Any device for utilizing steam to counterbalance an opposing force, weight, or pressure —s -blast, n A current of steam at high pressure used in accelerating drafts, blowing out boiler-flues, etc —s.-blower, n. 1. A device for discharging steam, as into a chimney to aid the draft 2. A fan-blower operated by steam-power —s.-boiler, n Same as BOILER, 2 —s -box, n 1. A steam-chest 2. A box in which any thing, as lumber, is steamed —s -car, n [U S] 1. Any car driven by steam 2. pl A railway-train —s -carriage, n A carriage for road use, propelled by steam-power —s -case, n A steam-chest —s -casing, n A steam-jacket —s.-chamber, n A steam-chest, steam-box, steam-dome, or steam-room —s -chest, n 1. The box or chest through which steam is delivered from a boiler to an engine-cylinder It contains the slide-valve or other device for regulating the passage of the steam See illus under CYLINDER and LOCOMOTIVE 2 A chest in which anything is steamed, as a fabric to fix its colors —s.-chimney, n A space about the uptake or flue of a boiler, for superheating steam —s.-coal, n Coal used for steam-boilers especially on steamboats —s.-cock, n See COCK¹, n, 6 —s.-coil, n A coil of pipe, or more frequently lengths of pipe connected by return-bends, supplied with steam, as for heating a room a form of steam-radiator —s.-color, n A dye fixed in a print by steam —s.-crutch, n Same as SOAP-CRUTCH —s -cut, vt To wear in furrows with steam as in the metal of a steam-valve —s -cutter, n A small steam-launch, a ship's cutter propelled by steam —s -cylinder, n See CYLINDER, 2 (1) —s.-digger, n A steam-shovel —s -excavator‡ —s.-doctor, n 1. A physician who employs steam-baths largely or exclusively in the treatment of disease 2. An independent steam feed-pump for a boiler —s -dome, n A chamber upon the top of a boiler, from which the steam passes to the cylinder or the heating-apparatus See illus under LOCOMOTIVE —s -drier, n Any device for rapid drying by means of circulating air, heated by steam-coils used in seasoning lumber, drying clothes etc —s.-drum, n A cylindrical reservoir, usually horizontal, connected by a pipe with a boiler, and intended as a store for steam —s -edge, n That edge of a distributing-valve which admits and cuts off steam distinguished from exhaust-edge, which opens and closes the port for exhaust s.-ends‡.— s -fit, n A fit rendering the escape of steam impossible —s -fitter, n One who installs or repairs steam heating-apparatus, steam pipes etc —s -fitting, n 1 The occupation of a steam-fitter 2 pl The paraphernalia necessary to the installation of steam heating-apparatus steam-pipes, etc —s -gas, n Superheated steam —s.-generator, n A steam-boiler —s -gun, n A gun employing the force of steam to project a missile —s -heat, n 1. Thermodynamics The heat required to raise water from the freezing-point to the boiling-point and then vaporize it different for different pressures 2 Heat given out by steam, as through steam-heated metallic surfaces of radiators, etc —s -heater, n A heater in which steam is employed, as by means of radiators —s -hopper, n [Eng] A large barge with a hopper, used in dredging, worked by steam and serving to carry away the material to deep water —s -house, n A building or room in which articles, as oysters, lumber, etc, are steamed —s -injector, n See INJECTOR, n, 2 —s -jacket, n A casing or jacket around a steam-cylinder, steam-kettle, or other vessel, so arranged that steam may occupy the space between the vessel and the casing, for the purpose of heating the former —s.-jacket, vt —s -jammer, n A jammer worked by steam —s.-jet, n A blast of steam, as from a nozle —s -joint, n A steam-tight joint —s -kettle, n 1 A large kettle or vessel, usually supplied with a steam-jacket used for steaming articles and in various manufacturing processes 2 A boiler used for cooking food for live stock —s.-kitchen, n A domestic device for cooking by steam —s lead, n Same as LEAD¹, n, 1 (1) —s -loop, n A pipe from a source of condensation of steam to the boiler, to return water without use of traps or other mechanism It consists of three parts — a riser from the coil or separator, a horizontal pipe and a vertical pipe or drop-leg entering the boiler —s -mason, n [Eng] A stone dressing or turning machine driven by steam —s -metal, n [Eng] Any copper alloy capable of resisting exposure to steam —s.-motor, n A steam-engine —s -navigation, n The art or act of employing steam in the propulsion and navigation of vessels —s -navvy, n A dredging- or digging-machine operated by steam —s -organ, n Same as CALLIOPE, 2 —s -oven, n An oven heated by steam under pressure —s.-packing, n Packing for (1) the piston of a steam-cylinder (2) any steam-tight joint See PACKING¹ —s -pan, n A vessel having a double bottom that forms a steam-chamber —s.-pipe, n A pipe for conveying steam (1) In a system of heating or drying by steam, a supply-pipe, as distinguished from one returning condensed water (2) A pipe leading from a boiler, as to an engine, or from an engine to a condenser, or to the air s.-piping†.— s -plow, n See PLOW —s -port, n 1. The end-port in a steam-chest or slide-valve seat See illus under MARINE ENGINE 2. Any port in such a chest or seat 3 The passage leading from such an opening 4 Any opening for the passage of steam —s -power, n The power of steam applied, as by a motor, to produce a desired result —s -press, n A press, as a printing-press, operated by steam —s -printing, n Printing in which steam is employed to operate the presses —s.-propeller, n A screw propeller operated by steam —s.-pump, n. See PUMP —s -radiator, n See RADIATOR, 2 —s -ram, n A steam-driven pump of the pulsometer type, especially constructed for use in deep wells —s -road, n A railway on which steam-cars run —s -room, n 1 The steam-space in a boiler 2. A room where steaming operations are carried on —s -separator, n See SEPARATOR n, 1 (1) —s -shovel, n See SHOVEL, n —s -space, n Space for steam as in the upper part of a steam-boiler —s -stable, n 1 A table or its equivalent heated by steam as used in restaurants to keep food hot, in a stereotyping-room to dry paper matrices, etc 2. A tabular arrangement of data concerning steam and its properties, as temperatures pressures densities etc —s.-thawing, n 1 Softening frozen earth for mining or excavation by means of live steam conveyed through pipes which are usually provided with drive-points permitting them to be advanced as the earth is softened 2. Any method of thawing frozen outlets pipes etc, by the application of jets of steam —s.-tight, a Capable of withstanding the pressure or preventing the passage of steam said of joints tanks etc —s -tightness, n —s.-toe, n. That toe by which an admission-valve of a steam-engine is raised See TOE —s.-trap, n An automatic device to allow the escape of water of condensation from steam-pipes See illus under TRAP —s -turbine, n See TURBINE, 2 —s.-valve, n A valve controlling the passage of steam, as from a pipe or port —s -wheel, n A kind of rotary steam-engine impelled by the action of a steam-jet on radial blades on a wheel —s.-whistle, n A powerful signal-whistle operated by a jet of steam impinging on the thin edge of an inverted cylindrical cup usually attached to a steam-boiler, as of a locomotive —s.-worm, n A spiral coil of steam-pipe —superheated s, surcharged s, steam at a temperature higher than the condensing-point corresponding to its actual volume and density, so that it will expand and do work without being condensed —wet s, partially condensed saturated steam, containing mechanically suspended particles of water steam'boat", 1 stīm'bōt', 2 stēm'bōt', n 1. A boat or vessel propelled by steam, as a steamship, a steam-launch, or a steam-yacht, especially, a passenger- or freight-boat of considerable size for still-water navigation Blasco de Garay, a Spanish seaman, experimented with a steamboat of 200 tons burden of his own invention in the harbor of Barcelona, Spain, in 1543 This boat attained a speed of three miles an hour The first steamboat successfully operated in the United States was built by John Fitch, and in June, 1790, it began to ply as a passenger-boat between Philadelphia and Trenton Its speed was between 7 and 8 miles an hour Robert Fulton's "Clermont" was first operated in 1807 In Scotland, William Symington's steamboat, the "Charlotte Dundas," was successfully operated as a tug on the Forth and Clyde canal in 1803, and Henry Bell's "Comet" began plying as a passenger-boat on the Clyde river in 1811 2. [Slang] A very energetic person —steam'boat-bug", n A large water-beetle —s -coal, n The largest size of merchantable coal next above broken coal —s -rolls, n pl Those rolls in an anthracite-breaker which are set farthest apart, to break the coal into steamboat-coal steam'boat"ing, 1 stīm'bōt'ıŋ, 2 stēm'bōt'ıng, n 1. The operating of steamboats 2. [Slang] Hurry in doing work, specif, in bookbinding, the shearing of the edges of book-covers or uncovered books in a pile

steam'-en"gine, 1 stīm'-en'jın, 2 stēm'-ĕn'gın, n An engine that derives its motive force from the action of steam, commonly by confining it and utilizing the pressure, a form of heat-engine in which steam is the working fluid There is no record of the use of steam-expansion as a propulsive power up to the 17th century The contrivance described by Hero of Alexandria was a reaction turbine forced to revolve by the back-push of steam-jets issuing tangentially from a pivoted cylinder In his work on pneumatics (1601) Giovanni Battista della Porta suggested in effect the principle of steam-condensation and consequent suction incorporated by Thomas Savery in 1698 in his water-pump which, altho the first commercially successful steam-engine, consumed twenty times more coal than would a modern engine to do the same work It was operated by first forcing the water out of a closed oval vessel by steam pressure and then, after condensing the steam, utilizing atmospheric pressure to fill the vessel again with water In 1705 Thomas Newcomen greatly improved the pumping-engine by combining the principle of a cylinder and piston found in Denis Papin's engine (1690) with Savery's method of condensing the steam by artificial means In this engine the piston was raised by steam and then forced back by air-pressure after the steam had been condensed In spite of many mechanical improvements made especially by John Smeaton, this engine consumed scarcely less coal than that of Savery, and it became entirely obsolete when James Watt secured his first patents in 1769, in which he laid down principles still useful in the development of the steam-engine Watt's first great step was to add a condenser separate from the cylinder, so as to avoid the necessity of cooling the cylinder at each stroke, and thus make an enormous saving in the expenditure of heat In 1781 a second patent greatly extended the use of the steam-engine by securing a continuous revolving motion to a shaft provided with a fly-wheel The following year Watt added two improvements that practically put the steam-engine on its present modern basis The first was the double use of steam, or introducing the steam alternately at the ends of the cylinder, instead of at one end only — the principle of the reciprocating engine the second was the use of steam expansively or shutting off the steam before the piston had made its full stroke As Watt did not approve of high-pressure steam seldom using more than 7 pounds per square foot in his engines, it was left to Richard Trevithick in England and Oliver Evans in America (about 1800) to inaugurate the high-pressure (and at that time non-condensing) engine which opened the way to Stephenson and the modern locomotive The modern steam-engine is usually of the reciprocating type and is made in a great variety of forms It consists of a steam-chest, enclosing a slide-valve or other distributing-valve or -valves in connection with steam-ports for regulating the flow of steam alternately to each end of a cylinder containing a piston and at the same time opening a passage from the opposite end of the cylinder to another working cylinder to the outside air or to a condenser The to-and-fro motion of the piston through the agency of piston-rod, cross-head, and connecting-rod operates a crank, thus securing a rotary motion and rendering the force available for driving machinery A steam-engine is stationary when mounted in fixed and permanent form portable when mounted with the boiler on wheels so as to admit of being moved about to any point where the power is to be utilized semiportable when of small size, with the engine arranged as a fixture on top of the boiler, and locomotive when furnishing power to move itself about and to draw a load See LOCOMOTIVE, list under ENGINE, and illus under MARINE ENGINE

The original steam-engine is the Æolipile of Hero exhibited in the Serapeum of Alexandria 150 B C KNIGHT Am Mech Dict

The first steam-engine with cylinder and piston was no doubt the invention of Denis Papin (1690) . Newcomen in conjunction with Calley (1705), made the piston engine a practical machine Nelson's Perpetual Encyc vol III p 418 [T N '11] steam'er, 1 stīm'ər, 2 stēm'er, n 1. Something that is propelled or worked by steam-power (1) A large steamboat, steamship as an ocean steamer (2) A steam fire-engine (3) A road-locomotive (4) [Colloq] An automobile propelled by steam 2 A vessel in which something is steamed (1) A domestic vessel in which food is cooked by steaming (2) A vat in which grain is steamed (3) A receptacle in which materials are reduced to pulp or otherwise disintegrated by steam (4) A steam-box or steam-chest, as for steaming lumber or fixing colors 3. One who steams some material, as calicoes to fix their colors, or wood for bending, or oysters in a cannery 4 A steam-boiler with regard to its steam-generating power, as, a bad steamer 5 A steamer-duck —steam'er-cap", n A cap to wear at sea usually of cloth and having a visor —s -duck, n A large sea-duck (Tachyeres cinereus), of the Falkland Islands and Straits of Magellan, that loses the power of flight when mature, but swims very rapidly, using its wings like paddles,—s.-trunk, n A trunk that fits under a ship's bunk steam'-gage", 1 stīm'-gēj', 2 stēm'-ḡāg', n A gage for indicating the pressure of steam, as in a boiler usually an attachment to a boiler, having mechanism by which the steam turns a pointer on a dial bearing figures, showing the pressure in pounds to the square inch The most common varieties use either a spring or a column of mercury to act against the pressure, and in either case are connected with the boiler by a bent tube for holding water to prevent steam reaching the gage steam'-gauge"‡

—thermometric steam-gage, a gage that shows steam-pressure by the degree of expansion of a liquid as mercury, caused by the heat of the steam, a thermometer graduated to show pressure of saturated steam per unit of area instead of or in addition to degrees of temperature steam'-ham"mer, 1 stīm'-ham'ər, 2 stēm'-hăm'ĕr, n. 1. A powerful machine hammer in which a steam-cylinder mounted between guides delivers a downward blow with a ram attached to its piston, so that the impulse of the steam and the weight of the moving parts may act together in one direction, tho often the steam is used only to raise the piston and ram, which are allowed to fall by their own weight The height of the fall and the force of the blow can be regulated at will The steam-hammer, once used for the largest forgings, is now almost entirely superseded for armor plate and heavy forgings by the hydraulic press It was invented by James Nasmyth of Edinburgh in 1838

a, anvil c, cylinder d, die; l levers for controlling the valve-mechanism (v), r, ram.

2. [Rare] Any hammer operated by steam steam'i-ness, 1 stīm'ı-nes, 2 stēm'ı-nĕs, n The quality of being steamy, vaporous, or misty steam'ship", 1 stīm'ship', 2 stēm'shĭp', n A large vessel propelled by steam and designed for ocean traffic; now usually a screw steamer Compare STEAMBOAT steam'way", 1 stīm'wē', 2 stēm'wā', n A channel cast around or upon a cylinder of an engine, for the admission of steam, and sometimes also for its exhaust steam'y, 1 stīm'ı, 2 stēm'y, a Consisting of, like, or full of steam, emitting steam, vaporous, misty, moist.

steen, v & n Same as STEEN ste-ap'sin, 1 stī-ap'sın, 2 stē-ăp'sın, n An unorganized ferment contained in pancreatic juice not yet isolated, but known by the fact that it decomposes fat into glycerin and fatty acids [< STEARIN + PEPSIN] ste'a-rate, 1 stī'ə-rēt 2 stē'a-rāt, n A salt of stearic acid.

ste-ar'ic, 1 stī-ar'ık, 2 stē-ăr'ic, a Chem Of, pertaining to, or derived from stearin [< Gr stear, suet] —stearic acid, a white fatty compound ($C_{18}H_{36}O_2$) crystallizing in nacreous laminæ, contained in the more solid fats of animals as in beef- and mutton-suet, also in the fat of cows' milk, human fat, etc, and in many vegetable fats as shea-butter It is used for making candles, and then called commercially and improperly stearin ste'a-rin, 1 stī'ə-rın, 2 stē'a-rĭn, n 1. Chem Any one of three glycerids of stearic acid, specif, a white pearly crystalline compound ($C_3H_5(C_{18}H_{35}O_2)_3$) contained in many animal and vegetable fats more correctly tristearin. 2. Stearic acid as used for candles [< Gr. stear, suet] ste'a-rinet — ste-ar'ı-form, a Resembling stearin —ste'a-rin"er-y, n The manufacturing of stearin

Stearns, 1stûrnz 2stĕrnş n 1. Frederick Pike (11/n1851–12/-1919), an American engineer, member of the Isthmian Canal Commission built Wachusett's dam Mass 2 A county in central Minnesota 1,310 sq m county-seat St Cloud ste"a-ro-lac'tone, 1 stī'ə-ro-lak'tōn, 2 stē a-ro-lăc'tōn, n Chem The anhydrid ($C_{18}H_{34}O_3$) of a hydroxystearic acid obtained by the action of sulfuric acid on oleic acid [< STEARIC + LACTONE] ste"a-rol'ic, 1 stī"ə-rol'ık 2 stē"a-rōl'ic, a Chem Of or pertaining to a compound derived from oleic acid and isologous with stearic acid [< stear- in STEARIC + ol- in OLEIC] —stearolic acid, a crystalline compound ($C_{18}H_{32}O_2$) derived from oleic acid ste'a-rone, 1 stī'ə-rōn, 2 stē'a-rōn, n Chem A pearly crystalline compound ($C_{34}H_{70}O$) the ketone of stearic acid, obtained variously, as by the dry distillation of stearic acid ste"a-rop'tene, 1 stī ə-rep'tın 2 stē"a-rōp'tĕn, n Chem A solid crystalline compound that separates from a volatile oil on standing or exposure to cold Compare ELÆOPTENE [< Gr stear suet, + pĕnos, feathered, < petomai fly] ste"ar-rhœ'a‡ ste'a-ryl, 1 stī'ə-rıl, 2 stē'a-rĭl, n Chem The radical ($C_{18}H_{35}O$) of stearic acid [< stear- in STEARIC + -YL] ste'a-tite, 1 stī'ə-tıt, 2 stē'a-tīt, n Mineral Massive talc, soapstone found in extensive beds and quarried for hearths, sink-linings, coarse utensils, etc [< L steatītis, < Gr steatītēs, of dough made of flour of spelt, < stear, dough of flour of spelt] — ste"a-tit'ic, a ste"a-ti'tis, 1 stī ə-tel'tıs or -tī'tıs 2 stē"a-tī'tis or -tī'tis, n Inflammation of the fatty tissue [< Gr stear (steat-), fat] ste'a-to-, ste'at-, 1 stī'ə-to-, stī'at-, 2 stē'a-to-, stē'at-. From Greek stear (steat-), fat (prob < histēmi (√ sta), fix) combining forms — ste'a-to-cele, n A fatty tumor formed in the scrotum — ste"a-tog'e-nous, a Tending to cause disease of the sebaceous glands — ste"a-tol'y-sis, n Chem A process by which fats are emulsified before absorption — ste"a-to-ly'tic, a — ste"a-to'ma, n [-MA-TA, pl] Pathol A fatty encysted tumor in a sebaceous gland — ste"a-tom'a-tous (XIII), a — ste"a-to-path'ic, a Relating to diseases of the oil-glands of the skin — ste"a-top'y-ga, n A collection of fat upon the buttocks of some African races, especially the females — ste"a-top'y-gous, a Having or subject to steatopyga fat-buttocked — ste"a-top'y-gy, n 1. The state of being steatopygous 2 Steatopyga — ste"a-tor-nith'ic, a Of or pertaining to the Steatornithidæ — Ste"a-tor-nith'ı-dæ, n pl Ornith A family of birds variously affiliated, especially Coractiformes having the palate desmognathous dorsal vertebræ opisthocœlous and a resemblance to goatsuckers guacharos Ste"a-tor'nis, n (t g) — ste a-tor'ni-thid, n. — ste"a-tor'ni-thin (c¹, a — ste"a-tor ni-thold, a & n — ste"a-tor-rhe'a, n Same as STEARRHEA — ste"a-to'ses, n pl Pathol Skin-diseases, as a class, attended by abnormal secretion of the oil-glands or sebaceous follicles — ste"a-to'sis, n Pathol An abnormal deposit and accumulation of fat in the adipose tissue of a part, fatty degeneration of an organ as of the heart — ste"a-to-zo'on, n A parasitic mite (Demodex folliculorum) found in the sebaceous follicles ste-boy', 1 stı-boı', 2 ste-bŏy', interj A command or encouragement to a dog in setting him after a man or animal s'boy‡, st'boy‡.

stech, 1 steh, 2 stĕh, vi & vt [Scot] To puff, pant, also, to cram stech, n [Scot] Stuffing, guzzling, a groan, a crowd or confused mass heat sted'fast, } 1 sted'fast or -fəst, 2 stĕd'fast or -fəst, a 1. stead'fast, } Firmly fixed in faith or devotion to duty; not fickle or wavering, constant, as, a stedfast friend 2. Directed fixedly at one point or to one end, steady, as, a stedfast purpose 3. [Archaic] Firmly fixed in position, firm [< AS stedefæst, < stede, place, + fæst, fast] Syn. see FIRM, INFLEXIBLE PERMANENT — sted'[or stead']fast-ly, adv — sted'fast-ness, n The quality or state of being stedfast stead'fast-ness‡.

Sted'man, 1 sted'mən, 2 stĕd'man, n One of the principal methods of change-ringing invented by Fabian Stedman about 1670

Sted'man, Edmund Clarence (10/11833–1/11908) An American poet, critic, and financier stee, 1 stī, 2 stē, n [Prov Eng] A ladder, stile steed, 1 stīd, 2 stēd, n A horse, especially a war-horse, or one for occasions of state and display now chiefly a literary or poetical use [< AS stēda, stud-horse, < stōd, stud] steed'less, 1 stīd'les, 2 stēd'lĕs a Having no steed steed'y-okes†, n pl Reins straps, thongs steek, 1 stīk, 2 stēk vt [Scot] 1 To shut or close, as a door 2. To pierce, stick, stitch with a needle steek, n [Scot] The act of stitching a stitch, thread, pain (in the side) steek'ing†, n Stitching needlework steel, 1 stīl, 2 stēl, vt 1. To cover with steel, fit, fasten, or weld steel to or upon, plate, edge, face with, or furnish with a layer or fitting of steel, as, to steel the edge of an ax 2 To fortify or strengthen with or as if with steel 3. To make hard, severe, and unfeeling, or unyielding, harden, as, to steel one's heart against misfortune

His soul was steeled against the grosser seductions of appetite PRESCOTT Biog and Crit Miscell, C B Brown p 12 [in 1845]

4. To give a steely appearance to 5. [Prov Eng] To iron (clothes) — steeled wheel (Car-building), a cast-iron wheel the rim of which has been decarburized, also, one to which a certain proportion of steel has been added steel, a 1 Made or composed of steel, as, a steel spring 2 Containing steel, as, steel wire 3 Resembling steel, hence, hard, obdurate, unfeeling steel, n 1. Any one of many compounds of iron (chiefly with carbon) that is decidedly malleable at some high temperature and capable of hardening greatly by sudden cooling Its carbon content varies from 3 to 2 2 per cent, and it includes most common alloys of iron that are neither distinctly wrought iron nor cast iron Varieties of steel are classified according to (1) the presence or absence of slag as slagless steel or slag-bearing s; (2) their carbon content as decarbonized s, low carbon s, or mild s (containing from 05 to 3 per cent of carbon and used for wire and ship plates), medium carbon s. (containing from 3 to 8 per cent of carbon and used for axles and rails), high carbon s. (containing from 8 to 2 per cent of carbon and little used except when hardened and tempered) (3) their alloys as aluminum s, chrome s, manganese s, etc (4) their method or process of manufacture as acid s, basic s, Bessemer s, Clapp-Griffiths s, crucible s, Mushet s, open-hearth s, Robert process s, Stassano process s, Tropenas process s, Heroult process s, Colby and Kjellin process s, Siemens-Martin s.

I conceive it [steel] to consist (4) of a matrix of iron which is sometimes (as in ingot-iron and annealed steel) comparatively, or even quite pure and sometimes (as in hardened steel, manganese steel etc) chemically combined with a portion or even the whole of the other elements which are present probably in indefinite ratios its mechanical properties being greatly affected by them and (B) of a number of independent entities which we may style minerals chemical compounds of the elements present, including iron which crystallize within the matrix and by their mechanical properties shape, size and mode of distribution also profoundly affect the mechanical properties of the composite mass though probably less profoundly than do changes of corresponding magnitude in the composition of the matrix H M HOWE Metallurgy of Steel vol 1 § 1, p 2 [SCI PUB CO 1894]

Apparatus for the Manufacture of Cold-drawn Steel Rods or Tubes

d, a die adjustable by set-screws (a, a) c, a clutch for grasping the reduced or cold-drawn section (cd) of a steel rod (r), and drawing it through the die The power is received from a hydraulic cylinder (not shown) operating on the bar b

2 An implement or weapon made of steel Specif - (1) A sword, as, we will fight them with steel cold steel‡. (2) A steel rod with roughened surface for use as a knife-sharpener (3) A steel strip for stiffening a corset a corset-steel (4) A piece of steel for use in striking fire with a flint (5) [Gt Brit] A preparation of iron used as a medicine (6)† A mirror. [< AS stīle steel]

— alloy steel, an alloy of iron with a metal as chromium, manganese, or nickel which imparts certain properties to the alloy The alloy steels include chrome or chromium steel (containing about 2 per cent of chromium and from 8 to 2 per cent of carbon), an alloy that hardens intensely on sudden cooling and is used for the manufacture of armor-piercing projectiles, safe-plates and crushing-machinery, nickel s (containing about 3 per cent of nickel and 25 per cent of carbon), combining great strength with great ductility and non-rustility, and used for the best armor-plates manganese s (containing about 12 per cent of manganese and 1 5 per cent. of carbon) a non-flssile alloy that exceeds all other known materials in its combination of hardness and ductility used chiefly where resistance to abrasion is required, as in crushing- and dredging-machinery, and in some car-wheels silicon s. (containing from 2 to 3 per cent of silicon) tungsten s or wolfram (containing from 5 to 10 per cent of tungsten and 4 to 2 per cent of carbon), a hard alloy which does not lose its hardness by friction with iron and is hence used for iron-cutting tools and for magnets, chrome tungsten s, of which Taylor White s. is a variety, contains 8 5 per cent. of tungsten, 3 to 4 per cent of chromium and 75 to 1.25 per cent of carbon, vanadium s. (containing from 1 to .2 per cent of vanadium to increase its tensile strength) — bronze s, an alloy of copper, tin, and iron used as gun-metal — carbon s, ordinary steel, as distinguished from chrome steel, manganese steel, etc — cast s, any malleable compound of iron produced by fusion, including both Bessemer and open-hearth steel, as well as crucible steel — cement s, steel made by cementation blis'ter-steel"‡ — chilled s, steel suddenly cooled to hardness — crucible s, steel made in crucibles, a fine kind of cast steel — crushed s, steel hardened and pulverized used as a grinding powder — German s., a metal made from charcoal iron obtained from bog-iron or from sparry carbonate — high-speed s, an alloy steel, high in tungsten or molybdenum, and used for iron-cutting tools — homogeneous s, cast steel without blow-holes — India or Indian s, a fine, high-tempered natural steel from southern India made direct from the ore, wootz — ingot s, a slagless steel containing more than 3 per cent of carbon an obsolescent term — low s, steel containing from 03 to 05 per cent of carbon, and hence comparatively tough and soft and usually not susceptible of hardening or tempering mild s ‡, soft cast s, structural s ‡ — machinery s, n Steel suitable for making parts of machinery but not for cutting-tools — molybdenum s, steel resembling tungsten, but in which 1 per cent of molybdenum replaces 2 per cent of tungsten — native s, a steel or steely iron occurring in small masses and made by the ignition of coal near an iron-ore deposit — pressed or compressed s, steel molded under hydraulic pressure to increase density and avoid blow-holes — run s [Eng], cast steel — self-hardening s or air-hardening s, steel which hardens when raised above red-heat and allowed to cool under a moderate cold-air blast used especially as a high-speed steel — special s, steel in which another element than carbon gives the characteristic hardness, as chrome or nickel steel — steel'-clad", a Clothed with steel, clad in armor, armored — s -duck, n [Prov Eng] The merganser — s -finch, n A small finch-like bird (genus Hypochæra) — s -iron, n A mixture of iron and steel, imperfectly made steel — s.-mill, n 1 An establishment for making and rolling steel 2. A device for producing a stream of sparks by a steel disk rotating against a flint formerly used to give light in mines — s -press, n A machine for compressing molten steel in casting, to improve the quality of the product — s trap, a trap having two steel jaws that close by a spring that is liberated when an animal touches the trigger designed to grip the leg of the animal — s -works, n A plant where steel is made — tincture of s, a solut on of chlorid of iron in alcohol used as a tonic — tools s, n Steel of superior quality, that can be highly tempered for use in making cutting-tools — weld s, a slag-bearing iron containing more than 3 per cent of carbon

Ste-phol'de-a, 1 sti-fol'di-ə, 2 ste-fōl'de-a, n pl Protoz. A suborder of plectellarian radiolarians having a skeleton with sagittal ring [< Gr stephos, crown, + eidos, form]— ste-phol'de-an, a & n step'moth"er, n 1. A father's second or subsequent wife a woman who is the wife of one's father but not one's mother. 2 [Prov Eng] (1) Bot The pansy (Viola tricolor) (2) A hangnail. stepmother's blessing‡ — -ly, adv

Step'ney, 1 step'ni 2 stĕp'ny, n A parliamentary borough in E London England

Step ni-ak, 1 step'ni-ak, 2 stĕp'ni-āk, Serglus (originally Serglus Michaelovitch Kravchinski) (1852–12/21895) A Russian revolutionist and writer, exiled Underground Russia, King Stork and King Log, etc step'page, 1 step'ij 2 st^{e}p'ag n Pathol A gait characterized by lifting the foot unusually high to counteract the dragging of the toes due to inaction of the peroneal nerve seen in diabetic neuritis and locomotor ataxia step'-par"ent, n Either a stepfather or a stepmother steppe, 1 step, 2 stĕp, n 1. A vast nearly level plain devoid of forest, specif, one of the extensive plains in Russia and Siberia Far as eye could pierce the gathering gloom in every direction lay the barren steppe like a boundless ocean of snow

KENNAN Tent Life in Siberia p 310 [o p p 1870]
2. Phytogeog A treeless xerophilous grassland [< Rus. stepi, heath]— steppe'-cat", n The manul — s.-disease, n The rinderpest s.-murrain‡.

stepped, 1 stept, 2 stĕpt, a 1. Provided with, having, or forming a step or series of steps, as, a stepped pulley. 2. Supported by or resting in a step or lower bearing: said of a mast or of a shaft — stepped gable, a gable built in the form of a series of steps See CORBEL-STEPS, under CORBEL — s gear, a gear-wheel having teeth which are cut into steps in such a manner that the bearing surfaces are more continuous than in the ordinary form of spur-gear step'per, 1 step'ər, 2 stĕp'er, n A person or animal that steps, as, the horse is a good stepper or a high stepper step'ping[1], 1 step'iŋ, 2 stĕp'ing, n A set of steps, or of notches, bearings, etc, arranged in the form of steps; steps collectively, as, the stepping on the inner margins of the door of a safe — step'ping line", n That part of a bearding-line which curves upward toward either end of the hull — s.-point, n A point on the bearding-line of a ship's keel where the frame-timbers intersect it step'ping[2], ppr & verbal n of STEP, v step'ping-stone", 1 step'iŋ-stōn", 2 stĕp'ing-stōn", n 1. A stone forming a step or affording a foot-rest, as for crossing a muddy road or a stream, hence, anything by means of which one rises or advances, as, the stepping-stones to fortune

With one or two mooring posts to watch it and a course of stepping-stones the brook slides into the peaceful bay and is lost in larger waters BLACKMORE Springhaven p 2 [H 1887]
2. A horse-block step'stone"‡ [Rare] step'sis"ter, n The daughter of one's stepfather or stepmother by a previous marriage [vious marriage step'son", n The son of one's husband or wife by a pre-step'wise, 1 step'waiz 2 stĕp'wīz adv As if by a step or steps.

-ster, suffix A termination denoting profession, occupation, or agency originally the feminine of -ER (1), as still in the single example spinster After the Middle English period (14th century) it denoted simple agency or profession, often with a shade of contempt or depreciation; as huckster (properly feminine of hucker, now hawker), punster, rimester, seamster, trickster, youngster Compare -STRESS [< AS -estre, fem suffix] ster, stereo, abbr Stereotype, stereotyper, stereotyping.

ster., stg, abbr Sterling ste-ra'di-an, 1 stī-rē'di-ən 2 ste-rā'di-an n Geom The solid angle subtended at the center of a sphere by an area on the surface equal to the square of the radius and so by unit surface on a sphere of unit radius the unit of solid angular measure See SOLID ANGLE Compare STEREGON, RADIAN [< Gr stereos, solid + RADIAN] ster'co-, } 1 stūr'ko-, stūr'kər-, stūr'ko-ri-, 2 stĕr'co-, ster'cor-, } stĕr'cōr-, stĕr'co-ri- From Latin stercus ster'co-ri-, } (stercor-), excrement, dung combining forms — ster"co-bi'lin, n A brown pigment contained in the feces, and giving it its color — ster"co-ra'ceous, a Of or pertaining to excrement or dung as, stercoraceous vomiting ster'co-ral, 1 stūr'ko-ral 2 stĕr'co-ral I. a Of or pertaining to excrement II. n Excrement. [< L stercus dung] — stercoral abscess (Pathol), an abscess communicating with the large intestine and containing feces — s ulcer (Pathol), an ulcer caused by pressure of hardened fecal masses.

Ster'co-ran-ism, n The beliefs or practises of the Stercoranists Ster"co-ra'ri-an-ism‡ — Ster'co-ran-ist, Ster"co-ra'ri-an, n Ch Hist One who was charged with believing that after the sacramental bread was eaten the Lord's body was digested and evacuated like any other food a charge sophistically urged against their opponents both by the believers in and the deniers of transubstantiation Ster'co-rist‡ — Ster"co-ra-ri'i-dæ, n pl Ornith A family of longipennate birds having the upper mandible with three horny pieces and hooked, skuas or jaegers — Ster"co-ra"ri-i'næ, n pl Ornith The Stercorariidæ as a subfamily of Laridæ Ster"co-ra'ri-us, n (t g) — ster"co-ra'ri-id, n — ster"co-ra'ri-oid, a & n ster'co-ra-ry, 1 stûr'ko-rē-ı, 2 stĕr'co-rā-ry I a Of or pertaining to manure II n [-RIES, 1 -rız, 2 -rıs, pl] A place for holding dung [< L stercorarius, < stercus, dung] ster"co-re'mi-a, n Blood-poisoning due to morbific matter absorbed from the feces ster"co-ræ'mi-a‡. — Ster-co'ri-an-ism, etc Same as STERCORANISM, etc — ster"co-ric'u-lous, a Living in excrement, as some insects — ster'co-rin, n Same as KOPROSTERIN ster'co-lin‡. — ster'co-rite, n Mineral A vitreous white hydrogen-sodium-ammonium phosphate ($HaNa(NH_4)PO_4$), crystallizing in the monoclinic system

Ster-cu'li-a, 1 stər-kiū'lı-ə, 2 ster-cū'll-a, n Bot A genus typical of Sterculiaceæ consisting of large tropical trees which supply several valuable substances, as tragacanth and cordage [< L Sterculius, deity of manuring, < stercus, dung]

Ster-cu"li-a'ce-æ, 1 stər-kiū"lı-ē'sı-ı, 2 ster-cū"ll-ā'ce-ē, n pl Bot A family of herbs, shrubs, and trees — the cola-nut or Sterculia family of the order Malvales — having usually opposite, single, or 3-9-foliolate leaves, and a variously shaped inflorescence of regular perfect flowers with frequently monadelphous stamens and two-celled anthers There are 48 genera and about 750 species [< STERCULIA] — ster-cu"li-a'ceous, a ster-cu'li-ad, 1 stər-kiū'lı-ad, 2 ster-cū'll-ăd, n Bot Any plant of the Sterculia family (Sterculiaceæ) stere, 1 stîr, 2 stĕr, n A cubic unit of metric measure, equal to one kiloliter (1,000 liters) or one cubic meter See MEASURE, METRIC SYSTEM [< F stere, < Gr stereos, solid] ster'e-gon, 1 ster'ı-gon, 2 stĕr'e-gŏn, n Geom The whole amount of solid angular magnitude around a point in space See SOLID ANGLE, under ANGLE Compare STERADIAN [< Gr stereos, solid, + gōnia, angle]

Ster"el-min'tha, 1 ster el-mın'thə, 2 stĕr"ĕl-mın'tha, n pl Helminth A division of worms without an intestine, including tapeworms and flukes [< Gr stereos solid, + helmins (helminth-), worm] — ster"el-min'thic, -thous, a ster'e-o, 1 ster'ı-o, 2 stĕr'e-o, a & n [Colloq] Short for STEREOTYPE — ster'e-o clumps", n pl [Eng] Print Sectional blocks of regularly graded sizes used to form a base for a stereotype or electrotype plate — s mold, n A matrix or mold used in stereotyping ster"e-o-, 1 ster'ı-o-, 2 stĕr'e-o- Derived from Greek stereos, solid, firm, hard a combining form — ster"e-o-ag-no'sis, n Pathol A form of aphasia in which the patient loses the ability to distinguish the form of objects by touch — ster'e-o-bate, n Arch A substructure or continuous base without columns, as distinguished from a stylobate which has them — ster"e-o-bat'ic, a — ster"e-o-bi-noc'u-lar, a Noting or pertaining to a form of binocular field-glass so arranged that the object-glasses are farther apart than the human eyes, giving a stereoscopic effect — ster"e-o-blas'tu-la, n A blastula without an internal cavity — ster"e-o-cen'tric, a Chem Pertaining to a graphic conception of benzene in which one bond of each carbon atom is directed toward the center of formula — ster'e-o-chem'ic, ster"e-o-chem'i-cal, a Of or pertaining to stereochemistry — ster"e-o-chem'is-try, n The branch of chemistry that treats of the composition of matter as explained by the relations of atoms in space — ster'e-o-chrome, n A picture produced by stereochromy — ster"e-o-chro'mo-scope, n A stereoscope in which the three-color system is used to present natural colors by means of screens — ster'e-o-chro"my (XIII) n The art or process of painting with pigments mixed with soluble or water glass — ster"e-o-chro'mic, a — ster"e-o-chro'mi-cal-ly, adv

ster"e-o-com'pa-ra"tor, 1 ster'ı-o-kom'pə-rā"tər or -ter, 2 stĕr'e-o-cŏm'pa-rā"tor, n An instrument invented by Pulfrich, in 1901, for the comparison of pairs of celestial photographs made by the same camera at short intervals It is based upon the principle of the ordinary stereoscope Two star-pictures of the same region of the sky (or pictures of any celestial body) made at different times are superposed with the instrument If any change in the position of the objects on the two plates has occurred in the interval the object stands out from the rest of the background in stereoscopic relief ster"e-o-com-par'ert.

ster"e-o-e-lec'tric, a Of pertaining to, or noting electric currents caused when two solids especially metals, are brought together at different temperatures — ster"e-o-gas'tru-la, n A gastrula without an internal cavity ster"e-og-no'sis, 1 ster'ı-og-nō'sıs 2 stĕr'e-ŏg-nō'sis n The apprehension through the senses of the dimensions, shape, and corporeality of solid objects It is a compound of sensations of touch, pressure and muscular and joint sensations ster"e-og-no'si-a‡ — ster"e-og-nos'tic, a ster'e-o-gram, 1 ster'ı-o-gram, 2 stĕr'e-o-grăm, n Math A picture or diagram giving the impression of a solid in relief, or two pictures of an object combined so as to produce the effect of a solid, as in a stereoscopic picture [< STEREO- + Gr gramma, a writing] ster'e-o-graph‡. — star'ster"e-o gram, n A diagram of the field of the brighter stars as it would be viewed by an observer stationed between it and the field of lesser brilliancy ster"e-og'ra-phy, 1 ster'ı-og'ra-fı, 2 stĕr'e-ŏ'ra-fy, n 1. The art of constructing on a flat surface lines representing solids, perspective 2 Geom The branch of geometry that treats of solids and of the representation of regularly bounded solids [< STEREO- + -GRAPHY] — ster"e-o-graph'ic, a Of or pertaining to stereography ster"e-o-graph'i-cal‡. — ster"e-o-graph'i-cal-ly, adv

ster"e-o-i'so-mer, 1 ster ı-o-aı'so-mər, 2 stĕr o-o-ı'so-mer, n Chem A compound which is stereoisomeric with one or more other compounds ster"e-o-i-som'er-ide‡, [< STEREO- + Gr ísos, equal, + meros, part]

Stereoisomerisms
1 Dextrotartaric acid 2 Levotartaric acid 3 Inactive or mesotartaric acid ster"e-o-i-som'er-ism, 1 ster'ı-o-aı-som'er-ızm, 2 stĕr'e-o-ı-sŏm'er-ısm, n Chem An isomerism which depends upon the spatial arrangement of the atoms or groups in a compound Such isomeric compounds contain at least one asymmetric carbon atom which is often represented as a tetrahedron, the inside of which constitutes the carbon atom and the summits, its affinities Thus, a compound having one asymmetric carbon atom, as an optically active lactic acid, could have two isometric forms one being the image of the other This isomerism could not be accounted for if the atoms were considered as lying in the same plane, as then the structural formulas would be identical Compounds may contain two asymmetric carbon atoms as in the tartaric acids Certain ethylene derivatives, as maleic and fumaric acids, may be considered as being composed of two tetrahedrons having two summits in common The different modifications in stereoisomeric compounds are marked by differences in optical activity — ster"e-o-l"so-mer'ic, a ster"e-o-mer'ict.

Stereoisomerisms
1 Dextrolactic acid 2 Levolactic acid

ster"e-ol'e-pis, n A serranoid fish (genus Stereolepis), as the California jewfish (S gigas) — ster'e-o-man"cy, n Divination by the elements ster'e-ome, 1 ster'ı-ōm, 2 stĕr'e-ōm, n Bot A special mechanical or strengthening tissue in vascular plants, consisting of thick-walled elongated (prosenchymatous) cells variously grouped, either in, around, or remote from the fibrovascular bundle The principal kinds of stereome are bast-fibers and collenchyma-cells, the former thickened uniformly and usually dead, the latter thickened only in the angles and actively alive [< Gr stereōma, solid body, < stereos, solid] ster'e-omt.

ster"e-om'e-ter, 1 ster'ı-em'ı-tər, 2 stĕr'e-ŏm'e-ter, n 1. Physics An instrument for measuring the volume of a body, as the capacity of a vessel, also, one for measuring the specific gravity of liquids, powders, etc 2 An adaptation of the Roentgen ray to determine the positions of broken bones or of foreign bodies — ster"e-o-met'ric, -ri-cal, a — ster"e-o-met'ri-cal-ly, adv — ster"e-om'e-try, n 1. Math The art of measuring solids, the geometry of solids 2 The measurement of volume 3 The determination of specific gravities, as of liquids, powders etc ster"e-o-mi-crom'e-ter, n 1 An apparatus attached to a telescope whereby the measurement of small angles in the area of vision may be determined by noting the projection upon squares with the uncovered eye 2 A stereographic measuring-apparatus — ster"e-o-mon'o-scope, n An instrument of two lenses which shows a picture on a ground-glass screen as tho it were a solid body — Ster"e-o-neu'ra, n pl Zool Invertebrate metazoans — ster"e-o-neu'ral, a — ster"e-o-phan'ta-scope, n A kinetoscope producing moving pictures with perspective effect — ster"e-o-phor'o-scope, n A variety of stereotrope — ster"e-o-pho-tog'ra-phy, n The production of stereoscopic photographs, either with a special camera made for the purpose, or with an ordinary camera, successively placed so as to produce two correctly differentiated pictures — ster"e-o-pho"to-mi'cro-graph, n A stereoscopic photograph of a microscopic specimen — ster"e-o-plan'i-graph, n Physics A device for drawing topographic maps from measurements made by a stereocomparator — ster"e-o-plan'u-la, n Btol A solid planula — ster'e-o-plasm, n 1. Btol The more solid part of protoplasm 2 Zooph An endothecal structure variously situated in corals, often enveloping or connecting septa or forming a solid mass in the interior of the corallum ster"e-o-plas'ma‡. — ster"e-o-plas'mic, a ster"e-op'ti-con, 1 ster'ı-op'tı-kən, 2 stĕr'e-ŏp'tı-cŏn (XIII), n A double magic lantern, the objective tubes of which can be focused on the same part of a screen used to bring one image after another on the screen by the alternate use of the lanterns, one picture, by this means, appearing to dissolve gradually into another [< STEREO- + Gr optikos, of sight]

Ster"e-or'ni-thes, 1 ster ı-ōr'nı-thīz, 2 stĕr'e-ōr'nı-thēs n pl Paleon An order of extinct birds distantly related to the herons and Sertema, some of gigantic size, found in Patagonia [< STEREO- + Gr ornis, gl ornithes, bird] — ster"e-or-nith'ic, a ster'e-o-scope, 1 ster'ı-o-skōp, 2 stĕr'e-o-scōp, n 1. Physics An optical instrument for blending into one image two pictures of an object from slightly different points of view, so as to produce upon the eye the impression of relief The stereoscopic effect may be produced by simply placing a card between the eyes, also by reflecting the pictures by mirrors to the eye, and more commonly by an adjustment of two lenses 2 Surg A catheter-like instrument used for detecting stone in the bladder and foreign bodies in the flesh [< STEREO- + -SCOPE] — lenticular stereoscope, a stereoscope in which prismatic or decentered lenses are used instead of mirrors — reflecting s, a stereoscope in which two plane mirrors, set at an angle to each other, reflect the light from the pictures in the proper direction for stereoscopic vision — ster"e-o-scop'ic, a Of or pertaining to the stereoscope, suited for use with the stereoscope as, a stereoscopic picture ster"e-o-scop'i-cal‡. — ster"e-o-scop'i-cal-ly, adv

Common Form of Stereoscope

The Principle of the Stereoscope

The two outlines in fig 1 show an object in relief the left one as it appears to the left eye and the right one as it appears to the right eye Their combination gives a sensation of actual solidity, as can be shown by copying them on a larger scale and holding a card between them so that they can be viewed simultaneously each latter ster"e-os'co-py, 1 ster'ı-os'ko-pı, 2 stĕr'e-ŏs'co-py, n The art of making or using stereoscopes and stereoscopic slides — ster"e-os'co-pist, n — ster"e-os'co-pist, n

Ster"e-o-spon'dy-li, 1 ster ı-o-spon'dı-laı 2 stĕr'e-o-spŏn'dy-ll n pl Herp A suborder of stegocephalians having solid biconcave vertebræ and much-folded teeth, embracing the most highly developed labyrinthodonts. [< STEREO- + Gr spondylos, vertebra] — ster"e-o-spon'dy-lous, a Having the neural arches and centra solidly united said of vertebræ in amphibians and reptiles opposed to temnospondylous ster"e-o-stat'ic, a Same as GEOSTATIC — ster"e-o-stat'ics, n [Rare] The statics of solids opposed to hydrostatics — ster"e-o-tax'is, n. Btol Same as THIGMOTAXIS — ster"e-o-te-lem'e-ter, n A stereotelescope with which one can calculate distances between objects seen — ster"e-o-tel'e-scope, n A binocular telescope used as a range-finder for guns ster"e-ot'i-ca, 1 ster'ı-ot'ı-kə, 2 stĕr'e-ŏt'ı-ca, n pl Surg Accidental lesions as a class, also, deformities affecting the hard parts [< Gr stereos, hard] ster"e-ot'o-my, 1 ster ı-ot'o-mı, 2 stĕr'e-ŏt'o-my, n Math The science or the art of cutting solids into figures by certain sections — ster"e-o-tom'ic, ster"e-o-tom'i-cal, a ster'e-o-trope, 1 ster'ı-o-trōp, 2 stĕr'e-o-trōp, n An optical device, partly on the principle of a phenakistoscope or zoetrope, for bringing pictures into relief and producing the illusion of their being in motion Stereoscopic pictures are placed on a revolving drum, and viewed through openings, usually in a cylinder, revolving at a much greater rate of speed than the drum and also usually through stereoscopic lenses [< STEREO- + Gr trepō, turn] — ster"e-o-trop'ic, a ster"e-ot'ro-pism, 1 ster'ı-ot'ro-pizm 2 stĕr'e-ŏt'ro-pism, n Physiol The movement of living protoplasm caused by its contact with a solid substance, thigmotaxis ster'e-o-type, 1 ster'ı-o-taıp, 2 stĕr'e-o-tŷp (XIII), vt [-TYPED, -TYP'ING] 1. To cast a plate in a stereotype-metal from a matrix of, as, to stereotype a form 2. To make or furnish stereotype plates for, as, the whole book was stereotyped 3. Figuratively, to put into fixed or formal shape, fix firmly or unalterably chiefly in the past participle, as, stereotyped ideas

What the summer night had whispered was stereotyped in his soul HAWEIS My Musical Memories p 123 [P & W 1892]

— ster'e-o-typ"er, n A manufacturer or workman who makes stereotype plates ster'e-o-typ"ist‡ ster'e-o-type, n 1. A cast or plate taken in stereotype-metal from a matrix, as of paper or plaster, reproducing the surface of that from which the matrix was made See STEREOTYPING 2. Figuratively, a fixed and unvarying representation of anything, as, nature is a stereotype of divine ideas — ster'e-o-type-foun"dry, n A place for the manufacture of stereotype plates — s metal, n An alloy resembling type-metal, but containing more lead, suitable for stereotype plates — s plate, a plate made by stereotyping usually about 1/9 of an inch in thickness, designed to be set on a block for printing — s press, n A stereotypers' mold, having a bed for the matrix, and a platen which is screwed against bearers placed between the bed and platen ster'e-o-typ"er-y, 1 ster'ı-o-taıp'ər-ı, 2 stĕr'e-o-tŷp'er-y, n [-IES, 1 -ız, 2 -ıs, pl] 1. Stereotypy 2. A foundry or room for stereotyping ster"e-o-typ'ic, 1 ster ı-o-tıp'ık, 2 stĕr'e-o-tŷp'ic, a Of or pertaining to stereotypy or stereotype plates ster"e-o-typ'i-cal‡ ster'e-o-typ"ing, 1 ster'ı-o-taıp'ıŋ, 2 stĕr'e-o-tŷp'ing, n The process or business of making stereotypes Stereotyping is now practically confined to two processes — the paper process, in which a papier-mâche matrix is used in the mold, and the plaster process, in which a plaster-of-Paris mold is made from the form The former is in common use by newspapers For fine or enduring work, however, electrotypes are preferred ster"e-o-ty-pog'ra-phy, 1 ster'ı-o-taı-pog'rə-fı, 2 stĕr'e-o-tŷ-pŏg'ra-fy, n The art of printing from stereotypes — ster"e-o-ty-pog'ra-pher, n ster'e-o-typ"y, 1 ster'ı-o-taıp'ı, 2 stĕr'e-o-tŷp'y, n 1. The art or act of making stereotypes, stereotypery 2. Pathol Persistent clinging to an idea or impulse, as seen in the insane ster"hy-drau'lic, 1 ster"haı-drō'lık, 2 stĕr"hŷ-drą'lic, a Of, pertaining to, or acting by forced displacement of a fluid, as in a sterhydraulic press [< STEREO- + HYDRAULIC] — sterhydraulic press, a form of hydraulic press in which a body of water is subjected to pressure, as by forcing in a small plunger, instead of by pumping in water ster'ic, 1 ster'ık, 2 stĕr'ic, a Org Chem Relating to relative position in space said of the component atoms in a molecule [< Gr steros solid] — steric hindrance, retardation of reaction caused by steric condition in the reacting substances ste-rig'ma, 1 stı-rıg'mə, 2 ste-rĭg'ma, n [-MA-TA pl] Bot 1. A stalk or support, as the awl-shaped specialized cell or portion of a cell that forms the immediate support of the conidia in many fungi, or a climidium in certain lichens 2 Any leaf-like extension of a decurrent leaf on the stem 3. A cell from which a spermatium or conidium is cut off [< Gr stērigma, support, < stērizō, prop] — ster'ig-mat'ic, a ster'ile, 1 ster'ıl, 2 stĕr'il, a 1. Having no reproductive power, barren 2 Bot (1) Producing no pistil, as a staminate or neutral flower, or no spores, as certain mycelia (2) Lacking something essential as a stamen without an anther, an anther without pollen, a frond without fruit-dots, etc 3. Lacking productiveness or fertility, unfruitful, hence, being without result, as, sterile soil 4 Containing no pathogenic bacteria or other micro-organisms said of a fluid 5. Destitute of attractiveness or suggestiveness said especially of literary work, as, sterile verse [< F stérile, < L sterilis, barren cp Gr stereos, solid] Syn. see ARID — ster"il(e-ly, adv — ste-ril'i-ty, n 1 The condition or quality of being sterile 2 Biol The loss of reproductive powers by a plant or an animal ster'il(e-ness‡.

ster'il-ize, 1 ster'ıl-aız, 2 stĕr'il-ız, vt [-IZED, -IZ'ING] 1. To deprive of productive or reproductive power, render barren, cause to be fruitless sometimes used figuratively, as, to sterilize the soul 2. To destroy bacteria or other micro-organisms in, as, to sterilize an infusion by boiling 3. [Rare] To render unproductive, exhaust impoverish, as land ster'il-ıs‡ — ster'il-ız"a-ble(r, a Capable of undergoing or accepting sterilization — ster'il-ız"a-bil'i-ty, n — ster'il-ı-za'tor -sa'tion, n ster'il-ız"er, 1 ster'ıl-aız"ər, 2 stĕr'il-ız'er, n One who or that which sterilizes, specif, an apparatus for destroying bacteria or other micro-organisms, as in infected clothing ster'il-ıs"er‡.

sterk, n Same as STIRK, 1 ster'let, 1 stûr'let, 2 stĕr'lĕt n [Rus] A small sturgeon (Acipenser ruthenus) found in the Black, Caspian, and Azof seas and in rivers of Russia, having a long, narrow snout and fringed barbels, and yielding superior caviar and isinglass.

ster'line, 1 stûr'lin or -lin, 2 stĕr'lin or -lin, n A composition of copper, zinc, and nickel used as a substitute for sterling silver, German silver [< STERLING]

The school called Stoic from the 'Painted Stoa' or Porch at Athens frequented by its masters was founded by Zeno (344–260 B C) and developed by his followers Cleanthes and Chrysippus R C JEBB Greek Literature pt II p 136 [A 1889]

Sto'ic, n 1. A member of one of the chief schools of Greek philosophy founded by Zeno about 308 B C
The Stoics drew their philosophy mainly from their predecessors, especially Socrates and Aristotle Their cosmology was pantheistic, matter and force being the two ultimate principles, and God being the working force of the universe giving it its unity beauty, and adaptation They regarded even the human soul, like everything else, as material, a kind of etherealized substance doomed finally to dissolution The foundations of all knowledge they held to be in the presentations of sense or sense-perception But since the world is in all respects the work of perfect divine wisdom, the duty of the wise man is in calm and unperturbed submission to the divine will The Stoics were, therefore, the determined and, on the whole, consistent opponents and critics of Epicureanism and of every form of hedonistic philosophy The supreme end of life, or highest good, according to their doctrine, is virtue, or the agreement of human conduct with nature or man's will with the divine will Thus the wise man becomes king and lord, according to the pattern of Zeus himself While some of the Stoics undoubtedly carried their doctrine to the extreme of denying the obligations of human pity and sympathy, the best of them came nearer to the truly Christian rule of life than any other of the ancient schools of philosophy Philosophy rose to its highest level through the Stoics at a time when the Greek mind was declining GLADSTONE Impregnable Rock essay III p 102 [I & CO 1890]

stom'ach, 1 stum'ək, 2 stom'ac, n 1. An anterior dilatation or series of dilatations of the alimentary canal, serving as one of the principal organs of digestion, a digestive cavity
In man the stomach is pyriform, and lies obliquely in the upper part of the abdomen mostly toward the left, between the esophagus and duodenum The mucous lining is thickly beset with tubular glands of two kinds the most important being the peptic glands, which elaborate the gastric juice Beyond the mucous lining is a layer of loose connective tissue covered by a muscular coat of longitudinal, transverse, and oblique fibers over which there is an outer serous membrane In many mammals the stomach is more complicated often being divided into several compartments which have received special names and are sometimes denominated as separate stomachs Thus in ruminants the food passes from the esophagus proper into the first stomach, the rumen or paunch thence into the second or reticulum (these two are usually considered as diverticula of the esophagus), from there it passes to the third stomach, the psalterium or omasum, and finally to the fourth stomach or abomasum See ESOPHAGUS, GASTRIC JUICE

On the left side, directly under the diaphragm, the stomach communicates with the esophagus by means of the cardiac orifice, on the right side it is continued into the intestines by means of the pylorus The larger portion directed upward and to the left is known as the fundus The size of the stomach depends largely upon the amount of fluid it contains and upon the degree of contraction or relaxation of the smooth muscle-fibers present in its walls The stomach serves to store up the undigested food temporarily to thoroughly mix the food, to begin the digestion of albuminous foods and to loosen up the fats from their connective tissue envelopments REISSIG & JELLIFFE in The Standard Family Physician vol I p 56 [F & W '07]

VARIETIES OF PRECIOUS AND ORNAMENTAL STONES

In the identification of precious stones the principal factors are (1) the index of refraction (in imitation stones or paste rarely exceeding 1 65 in genuine stones rising to 2 4), (2) specific gravity (usually above 4 in imitation stones and below 4 in precious stones), and (3) translucency (imitation stones being opaque to X-rays while precious stones are transparent), moreover paste lacks durability and loses its brilliancy on exposure

Mineralogical descriptions of the various stones and location where found are given in alphabetical place in the vocabulary See also CORUNDUM GARNET QUARTZ TOURMALIN Forexplanationsof the superior figures following the names in the table see foot-note strat'ic, 1 strat'ik 2 străt'ic, a Geol Same as STRATI-stra-tic'u-late, 1 stra-tik'yu-lĕt, 2 stra-tĭc'yu-lāt, a Geol Having numerous thin layers, either (1) of sedimentary deposition, as by oscillation or wave-motion, often somewhat oblique to the main layers of stratification, or (2) of deposition from solution, the layers being often those of color or structure, and not of fissility, as in banded agate [< STRATUM] — stra-tic"u-la'tion, n The layer like formation of glaciers caused by slipping on the lower ice, or bedding strat"i-fi-ca'tion, 1 strat'ı-fı-kē'shən, 2 străt'ı-fı-cā'shon, n The act of stratifying, or the state of being stratified Specif (1) Geol The deposition of sediments in beds or layers by any agency or process generally by water, sometimes by wind also, the bedded or layered structure so produced The evidences of stratification in a rock are, in general, the existence of continuous divisional planes of great extent, marking changes in the character of the material or the mode of deposition and the presence of fossils generally arranged in planes parallel to the plane of deposition and with their broader surfaces lying in the same planes Such divisions are called stratification-planes, and must be distinguished from cleavage-planes and from true foliation An unmetamorphosed sedimentary rock generally splits most readily along the stratification-planes (2) Physiol Deposition of the material of a cell-wall in layers (3) Biol (a) The thickening of a cell-wall by the deposition of successive layers of material (b) The arrangement of deposited cell-wall layers (4) Bot The laying of seeds between strata of sand sawdust, or other preservative material Seeds of trees are often kept thus till germination ensues (5) Elec A banded or striated appearance of an electric discharge in a rarefied medium (6) Engin A condition of the explosive charge in an internal-combustion engine characterized by strata of unequal richness — strat"i-fi-ca'tion-fo"li-a'tion, n The segregation of certain minerals in thin irregular discontinuous laminæ in planes parallel to the bedding or stratification strat'i-fied, 1 strat'ı-fīd, 2 străt'ı-fid, pa Arranged in strata or layers, specif, in geology, arranged in layers or beds, ordinarily through deposition as sediment Stratified rocks in many instances have been so metamorphosed as to lose much of their original character — stratified conductor (Physics), a conductor composed of alternate strips of substances with different conductivities — s discharge (Elec), a discharge showing stratification, usually brought about in a glass vessel — s drift (Geol), glacial drift that has been rearranged in layers by water strat'i-form, 1 strat'ı-fôrm, 2 străt'ı-fôrm, a Having the form of or constituting a stratum [< STRATUM + -FORM] strat'i-fy, 1 strat'ı-faı, 2 străt'ı-fy, v [-FIED, -FY'ING]

I. t 1. To deposit, form, or arrange in strata See STRATIFICATION 2 Forestry To preserve (seeds) by spreading (them) in alternating layers of earth or sand II i To be formed in strata, take the form of strata strat-tig'ra-pher, } 1 strə-tig'rə-fər, 2 stra-tĭg'ra-fer, n strat-tig'ra-fer", } A student of or a specialist in stratigraphy strat-tig'ra-phist.

strat-tig'r a-phy, } 1 strə-tig'rə-fı, 2 stra-tĭg'ra-fy, n strat-tig'ra-fy", } Geol 1. The order and relative position of the strata of the earth's crust 2. The study or description of such strata, stratigraphic geology See GEOLOGY [< STRATUM + -GRAPHY] — strat"i-graph'ic, -i-cal, a Of or pertaining to stratigraphy — strat"i-graph'i-cal-ly, adv

Strat"i-o-my'i-dæ, 1 strat'ı-o-maı'ı-dī, 2 străt'ı-o-mĭ'ı-dē, n pl Entom A family of brachycerous dipters, especially those with 3 basal cells of wings much prolonged, and veins of 2 main trunks much crowded forward Strat"i-o'mys, n (t g) [< Gr stratios, of an army (< stratos, army), + myia, fly] — strat"i-o-my'id, a & n — strat"i-o-my'oid, a

Strat"i-o'tes, 1 strat ı-ō'tiz, 2 străt ı-ō'tēz, n Bot A genus of European water-weeds belonging to the family Vallisneriaceæ Barren and fertile flowers grow on separate plants and are contained in 2-leaved spathes S aloides, the water-soldier, is the only species [< Gr strat ōtēs, Egyptian water-plant]

strat'lin, 1 strat'lın, 2 străt'lin, n [Scot] A step stra"to-cir'rus, 1 strō"to-sır'us, 2 strā"to-çĭr'ŭs, n A cloud identical in general with cirro-stratus, but denser and occurring at a lower level, a thick veil of gray or bluish cloud See CLOUD [< STRATUS + CIRRUS] stra-toc'ra-cy, 1 strə-tok'rə-sı, 2 stra-tŏc'ra-çy, n Government by the military class, military despotism

It (the Roman empire) was purely a government by the sword, or permanent stratocracy having a movable head
DE QUINCEY The Cæsars p 118 [T & F 1854]

[< Gr stratos, army, + kratĕō, rule]

stra"to-cu'mu-lus, 1 strē"to-kuū'mu-lus, 2 strā"to-cū'-mū-lŭs, n Cloud occurring in large, dark balls or rolls, frequently covering the sky, especially in winter, and giving it an undulated appearance See CLOUD stra-tog'ra-phy, 1 strə-teg'rə-fı, 2 stra-tŏg'ra-fy, n A description of an army or of whatever pertains to one [< Gr stratos, army, + -GRAPHY] — strat"o-graph'ic, i-cal, a — strat"o-graph'i-cal-ly, adv [stra-tot'ics

stra-ton'ics, a Of or pertaining to an army warlike

Stra-ton'i-cal, 1 strə-ton'ı-kəl, 2 stra-tŏn'i-cal, a Of or pertaining to Strato of Lampsacus (3d century B C), called the Physicist, belonging to the Peripatetic school His philosophy denied the transcendence of deity and transformed Aristotelianism into pure naturalism It therefore gave rise to the name Stratonical atheism, which regarded life and mind as mere natural attributes of matter Stra-ton'ics — Strat"o-nI'cian, n stra'tose, 1 strē'tōs, 2 strā'tōs, a [Rare] Bot Arranged in layers, stratified [< STRATUM] stra'to-sphere, 1 strē'to-sfır, 2 strā'to-sfēr, n Same as ISOTHERMAL LAYER [< STRATUM + SPHERE]

Strat'ton and Bude, 1 strat'ən, būd, 2 străt'on, būd A town in Cornwall England here the Royalists defeated the Parliamentarians May 16, 1643 strat'u-la, 1 strat'yu-lə, 2 străt'yu-la, n pl [Rare] Geol Thin delicate layers in rock-strata stra'tum, 1 strē'tum, 2 strā'tŭm, n [STRA'TA, less commonly STRA'TUMS, pl] 1. A natural or artificial layer, bed, or thickness of any substance or material, especially a nearly horizontal layer differentiated from its neighbors, as by composition or temperature

The floor of the ocean is generally overlaid by a stratum of ice-cold water setting southward from the polar regions
WINCHELL Sketches of Creation p 404 [T 1870]

(1) Geol A bed of rock or earth, consisting of all the laminæ or layers sufficiently alike or related to be thus grouped by some geologists used synonymously with layer and bed

The term stratum is sometimes employed to designate the whole mass of a rock, while its parallel subdivisions are called beds or layers E HITCHCOCK Elementary Geology § 1, p 21 [T & P 1854]

(2) Anat & Zool A sheet or layer of tissue characterized by some special form or arrangement of structure

2. Archeol Any one of the layers of deposits revealed in the process of excavation and which result from successive civilizations, as of ancient Ilium 3. Figuratively, something corresponding to a stratum of the earth, as, a low stratum of society [L, < stratus, pp of sterno, spread] — competent stratum. Geol 1. A stratum so firm as to resist a rise of lava without being broken 2 A stratum sufficiently unyielding to spread the force involved in the folding of strata by lateral compression — s cinereum (Anat), a layer of gray matter in the two anterior corpora quadrigemina underneath the stratum zonale — s. corneum, the horny outer layer of the epidermis — s. granulosum, a layer of granular cells in the epidermis lying upon the Malpighian layer — s lemnisci, a layer of fibers interspersed with nerve-cells, in the anterior corpora quadrigemina underneath the stratum opticum — s lucidum, a thin layer of cells in the epidermis lying upon the stratum granulosum — s Malpighii, the innermost layer of the epidermis — s opticum, a layer of fibers and ganglion-cells in the two anterior corpora quadrigemina beneath the stratum cinereum — s zonale, the white matter which forms the superficial layer of the two anterior corpora quadrigemina stra'tus, 1 strē'tus, 2 strā'tŭs, n Meteor A low horizontal sheet of cloud

This term has been used with a variety of meanings, but is now officially defined as follows A uniform layer of cloud resembling a fog but not resting on the ground The complete absence of details of structure differentiates it from other compact cloud forms Report of International Meteorological Conference Innsbruck, 05 See CLOUD [L, spreading < stratus see STRATUM]

Strau'bing, 1 straun'bıng, 2 strou'bing, n A town of E Lower Bavaria stress, 1 stres, 2 strĕs, tt 1. To subject to mechanical stress, as a timber 2. To put stress or emphasis on, as a syllable, emphasize, accent 3. [Archaic] To put into straits or difficulties, distress, straiten [< OF estressier, < L stringo (pp strictus), compress] stress¹, n 1. Special weight, importance, or significance, as, to lay great stress on a fact

> Fichte laid all stress on the subjective, conscious ego and the free moral will Schelling emphasized the objective — the unconscious development of nature
> W T HARRIS Hegel's Logic p 49 [s c g 1890]

2. Force exerted to or beyond the point of strain, tension, as, to subject a faculty to the utmost stress 3 Influence exerted forcibly, pressure, violence, compulsion, as, stress of weather

> We are both busy reflecting, it would seem driven to it by quite opposite pressure — you by stress of society and I by stress of solitude MRS CARLYLE in Froude's Jane Welsh Carlyle vol 1, letter cii, p 314 [s 1883]

4 In pronunciation and elocution, the relative force with which a sound, syllable, or word is uttered, in English, the main element in accent and one of the principal elements in emphasis, hence, in scanning, ictus

The simple forms of stress are known as (1) radical, or initial, when the maximum of force is at the opening or beginning of the sound uttered (2) median, or medial, when it is at the middle, and (3) vanishing, final, or close, when it is at the end The combination of radical, median, and vanishing stress results in thorough stress, and the union of radical and vanishing in compound s

5 Pros The metrical beat, or recurrent accent, by which an English verse is marked in feet or measures This generally coincides with the etymological and rhetorical accent

6. Mech (1) Any force or combination of forces tending to change the shape or size of a body, pressure of any kind, also, the intensity of any such force, usually expressed in pounds per square inch (2) The reaction of the interior parts of a solid body against forces tending to deform it (3) That of which a force and its reaction are opposite aspects, a force together with its reaction, as in tension, compression, or torsion

This law [the law that action and reaction are equal] may be called the law of stress It teaches us that every force in fact is one of a pair of equal opposite ones — one component that is of a stress G F BARKER Physics ¶ 76 p 71 [H H & co 1892]

— axis of stress, one of three lines such that the stress between the two sides of a plane perpendicular to it is normal to the plane — electromagnetic s, a pressure put upon the particles of a body by reason of its being in a magnetic field magnetic stress — homogeneous s, a stress that is the same in intensity and direction of axes in all parts of the interior of a body — initial s (Mech), stress that is ascribable to forces inherent in the nature of a structure or material and which remains when all forces under control are removed Such initial stress may, for example, be due to internal strains caused by uneven cooling of a casting or by the settling of a heavy structure under gravity — logical s, same as LOGICAL ACCENT — negative s, stress due to tension opposed to positive stress or stress due to compression — principal s., In a body under a complex stress, one of the three stresses, compressive, shearing, or tensile, occurring along its principal axes — stress'-di'a-gram, n A chart showing graphically the amount and direction of the stress on each member of a bridge roof, or other framed structure s -sheet‡.— s -ellipsoid, n An ellipsoid built upon the main axes of stress — tangential s, stress that tends to make the portions of a body on the two sides of a surface slide along each other shearing-stress — vibrant s, stress varying rhythmically — stress'ful, a Having great stress — stress'less, a Having no stress — stress'less-ness, n stress², n [Archaic] A condition of great need, extremity, distress [< DISTRESS]

-stress, suffix A feminine termination denoting agency or occupation, as, seamstress, songstress [< -STER + -ESS] sub-ax'il-la-ry, n Ornith An axillar sub-ax'il-lar†. sub-ba'sal. I. a Zool Situated near the base, as of a crinoid II n Echin A subbasal plate sub'base", 1 sub'bēs', 2 sŭb'bās", n 1 Arch The lowest member of a base or of a base-board when it is made in more than one layer 2. A secondary or auxiliary base of supplies [< SUB- + BASE, n] sub'-base'ment, n Arch An underground story, or any one of several below the first or true basement sub-bas'i-lar, 1 sub-bas'i-lar, 2 sŭb-bās'i-lar, a Situated near the base, as, the subbasilar plate of the mouth-parts of a chilopodous myriapod sub'bass", 1 sub'bās', 2 sŭb'bās', n In an organ, a 16-foot or 32-foot pedal-stop [< SUB- + BASS^2, n sub'-base'†, sub'bour-don†.

sub-bi'fid, 1 sub-bai'fid 2 sŭb-bī'fid, a Slightly bifurcate sub'bing, 1 sub'iŋ, 2 sŭb'ing, n 1. [Colloq] The act of working as a sub or substitute 2 [Eng] The practise of advancing wages on piece-work sub-bi'valve n A gastropod shell with an operculum sub-brach'i-ate, 1 sub-brak'i-ĕt, 2 sŭb-brāc'i-āt I a 1. Having the ventrals under the pectorals of or pertaining to the Subbrachiati 2. Situated under the pectorals, as ventrals II n One of the Subbrachiati Sub-brach"i-a'ti, 1 sub-brak i-ē'tai 2 sŭb-brāc'i-ā'ti, n pl Ich A former order of malacopterygian fishes with ventrals under pectorals, as in cod [< SUB- + L brachiatus; see BRACHIATA] Sub-brach"i-a'les† — sub-brach'i-an, n, a sub-brach"y-ce-phal'ic, a Craniom Somewhat brachycephalic, having a cephalic index of from 80 to 84 sub-brig"a-dier', n Mil Formerly an officer in the Horse Guards of the British army, having the rank of cornet — sub-cal'ca-rine†, a Situated below the calcarine fissure of the cerebrum — subcalcarine convolution, the convolution between the collateral and calcarine fissures sub-cal'i-ber, a Of smaller caliber than the firearm from which it is to be fired said of a projectile A cup or disk is used to make up the deficit sub-cal'i-bret.
sub"cam-pan'u-late, sub-can'cel-late, etc See SUB-sub-can'tor, n Mus Same as SUCCENTOR sub-can'tus, n A rhythmical or singsong mode of utterance — sub-car'bid, sub-car'bide, n Chem A carbid containing less than the usual amount of carbon as possibly in certain iron carbids — sub-car'bon-ate, n Chem A basic carbonate — sub-car"bon-if'er-ous, a & n Same as DINANTIAN and LOWER CARBONIFEROUS — sub-car"bon-if'er-ous, a — sub-car'di-nal, a Denoting a vein on the under side of the Wolffian body — sub-cau'dal I.a 1. Situated under the tail or other caudiform process, as, subcaudal chevron-bones, a subcaudal plate of a snake 2. Situated near the tail II n A subcaudal plate urostege — sub-cau'date, a 1. Having an incomplete tail like process 2 Bot Somewhat caudate — sub"cau-les'cent, a Bot Very short-stemmed almost acaulescent — sub"ce-les'tial, a 1 Being beneath the heavens terrestrial 2 Astron Directly beneath the zenith sub'cel"lar, 1 sub'sel'ər, 2 sŭb'sĕl'ar, n A cellar under another cellar sub-cen'tral, 1 sub-sen'trəl, 2 sŭb-sĕn'tral, a 1. Situated beneath the center 2. Almost central slightly eccentric 3 Situated beneath the centrum of a vertebra, as the subcentral or hemal arch 4. Occurring below the central sulcus of the brain, as an inconstant sulcus — sub-cen'ter, n — sub-cen'tral-ly, adv sub'chant"er, n Mus Same as SUCCENTOR sub-che'la, n Zool A terminal hook-like appendage that bends down on the joint to which it is attached — sub-che'late, a. Having or resembling a subchela — sub-che'li- form, a Subchelate — sub-chlo'rid, n Chem A basic chlorid as copper subchlorid (Cu_2Cl_2), cuprous chlorid sub-chlo'ride‡. — sub'chord", n Math A chord of less than unit length — sub-chor'dal, a Situated below or ventrally from the chorda dorsalis or notochord — sub"cinc-to'ri-um, n Same as SUCCINCTORIUM — sub-cin'gulum, n Same as SUCCINCTORIUM — Sub-clam"a-to'res, n pl Zool The broadbills (Eurylæmidæ) as a superfamily of passerine birds sub'class", 1 sub'klas', 2 sŭb'clas', n A primary subdivision of a class, as in botany and zoology sub-cla'vate, a Slightly clavate or club-shaped, enlarging somewhat toward one end sub-cla'vi-an, 1 sub-klē'vi-ən, 2 sŭb-clā'vi-an, a 1. Situated beneath or deeper than the clavicle, as, the subclavian vessels 2. Of or pertaining to the subclavian vessels [< SUB- + L clavis, key] — subclavian artery, the large trunk that passes under the clavicle to convey blood to the arm — s groove, a groove made by the subclavian vessels on the first rib — s. muscle (Anat), the subclavius — s triangle (Anat), see TRIANGLES OF THE NECK — s vein (Anat), that portion of the main venous trunk of the arm that lies under the clavicle, extending from the axillary vein to the innominate vein sub-cla'vi-an, n A subclavian vessel or nerve, or the subclavius sub"cla-vic'u-lar, a Situated between the clavicle and the thorax infraclavicular sub-cla'vi-us, 1 sub-klē'vi-us, 2 sŭb-clā'vi-ŭs, n A small muscle that passes from the clavicle to the first rib See illus under MUSCULAR SYSTEM [< SUB- + L clavis, key] sub-coast'al, a Denoting a region of lower level than the coast-line, as a continental shelf — sub"col-lat'er-al, a Situated under the collateral fissure of the cerebrum — sub'com-part"ment, n Forestry See COMPARTMENT, n 6 — sub"con-choi'dal, a Imperfectly conchoidal — sub-con'flu-ent, a Partially blended, as colors or markings, which tend to run together sub-con'scious, 1 sub-ken'shus, 2 sŭb-cŏn'shŭs, a 1. Only dimly conscious, not clearly discerned by the conscious subject, lacking intellectual clearness 2. Denoting such processes as seem to have psychical characteristics but are not attended by consciousness With those psychologists who identify the conscious with the strictly mental, the term, when properly applied, can have only a physiological or psychophysical signification — sub-con'scious-ly, adv With faint consciousness or without consciousness sub-con'scious-ness, n 1. Faint or partial consciousness 2. A hypothetical state or process, having one or more of the characteristics usually described as mental, but without any accompaniment of consciousness, mentality, assumed to be below the threshold of consciousness sub"con-tig'u-ous, a At close range — sub'con"ti-nent, n A land area of considerable magnitude but smaller than any of the six continents — sub"con-tin'u-ous, a Nearly continuous having but slight breaks or interruptions, as a line or a period of time sub"con-tract', vt & vi To contract under or in subordination to a previous contract sub"con'tract, n A contract subordinate to another contract, as one for the subletting of work taken under contract sub"con-tract'ed, a 1. Contracted in subordination to or after another contract 2. Entom Somewhat contracted 3†. Betrothed the second time sub"con-trac'tor, n One who contracts with a contractor to do work embraced in the latter's contract sub-con'tra-ri e-ty, n The state of being subcontrary, especially, the logical relation between affirmative and negative subcontrary propositions See OPPOSITION sub-con'tra-ry, 1 sub-ken'trē-ri, 2 sŭb-cŏn'trā-ry, a Contrary in an inferior degree Specif (1) Geom Similar and having the two sides about one of the angles coincident while the third sides cut each other said of triangles, as 4 BC and ADE in the diagram (2) Logic Denoting the opposition of two subalternate propositions See OPPOSITION

Of subcontrary propositions one only can be false and both may be true JEVONS Lessons in Logic IX p 78 (MACM 1876] — subcontrary sections, a pair of circular non-parallel sections of a cone, as of one with an elliptical base sub-con'tra-ry, n [-RIES, 1 -riz, 2 -rĭs, pl] Logic A subcontrary proposition sub-con'vo-lute, a Bot Arranged in such a manner between the imbricate and the convolute mode of estivation that the petal wholly inside is next to the one wholly outside Compare SUBIMBRICATE sub-cos'ta, 1 sub-kes'ta, 2 sŭb-cŏs'ta, n Entom The subcostal vein sub-cos'tal, 1 sub kes'tal, 2 sŭb-cŏs'tal, a 1. Situated upon the deeper surface of the ribs, as, the subcostal muscle 2 Situated at the inferior edge of a rib, as, the subcostal groove 3. Situated caudally from the ribs, taken collectively, as, the subcostal angle formed by the ribs at the lower aperture of the thorax 4. Entom Situated behind and near the costal vein of an insect's wing, as, the subcostal vein or cell [< SUB- + COSTAL] — subcostal muscles (Anat), small muscular slips from the deeper surface of the ribs to succeeding ribs sub-cos'tal, n 1. A subcostal muscle sub"cos-ta'lis‡. 2 Entom The subcostal vein — sub-crep'i-tant, a Med Slightly crepitant as a subcrepitant râle or rattle, a symptom of bronchial catarrh and softened tubercles of the lungs — sub-crep'i-ta'tion, n The noise of a subcrepitant râle or rattle sub"cru-re'us, 1 sub'kru-ri'us 2 sŭb'cru-rē'ŭs, n A collection of muscular slips passing from the anterior surface of the femur to the capsule of the knee-joint [< SUB- + CRUREUS] sub"cru-ræ'us‡ — sub"cru-re'al, a sub"crus-ta'ceous, a Underneath a scab applied to a process of healing or cicatrization — sub-crust'al, a Geol Situated occurring, or formed beneath the earth's crust — sub-cul'trate, a Somewhat resembling a colter, curved on one side and straight on the other sub-cul'trat-ed‡. sub-cul'ture, n A bacteriological culture derived from another one sub"cu-ta'ne-ous, 1 sub'kiu-tē'ni-us, 2 sŭb'cū-tā'ne-ŭs, a Situated, found, or existing beneath the skin, used or applied beneath the skin, hypodermic, as, subcutaneous tissue, a subcutaneous mite, a subcutaneous application — subcutaneous operation (Surg), one which divides internal structures by an instrument inserted some distance from the division — -ly, adv — -ness, n sub'cu"tis, n The deeper portion of the cutis or true skin sub-dea'con, 1 sub-di'kn, 2 sŭb-de'cn, n Eccl A minister next in rank below a deacon In the Eastern churches he is considered in minor orders, but in the Roman Catholic Church, since about the 12th century, he ranks as in major orders His duties are to prepare the sacred vessels for the Eucharist and to sing the epistle, and, in the Eastern churches, to guard the gates of the sanctuary See ORDER [< LL subdiaconus, < L sub, under, and see DEACON] — sub-dea'con-ship, n The office of a subdeacon, the order of subdeacons sub-dea'con-ry‡.

sub'dean", 1 sub'din', 2 sŭb'dēn', n An assistant or substitute dean [< LL subdecanus, < L sub, under, and see DEAN¹, n] — sub'dean"er-y, n The office of a subdean — sub-dec'a-nal, a Pertaining to a subdean or subdeanery sub-dec'i-mal, a Derived by dividing by a multiple of ten — sub-dec'u-ple, a Containing one part of ten sub"de-duc'i-ble, sub"del-ta'ic, etc See SUB-sub"de-lir'i-um, n Pathol A low form of delirium with lucid intervals frequent in typhus fever — sub-den'tal, n The dentary or tooth-bearing lower jaw-bone of fishes — sub-den'tate, a 1. Indistinctly or imperfectly dentate denticulate 2. [Rare] Having teeth in the lower jaw only, as a sperm-whale sub-dent'ed‡ — sub'de"pot, n Mil An auxiliary supply-depot — sub"de-riv'a-tiv(es', n Gram A word derived from a derivative, and not immediately from the primitive word — sub"de-ter'mi-nant, n Math The determinant formed from what is left of the matrix of a determinant when one or more rows and an equal number of columns are erased sub"di-ac'o-nate, 1 sub'di-ak'o-nēt, 2 sŭb'di-ăc'o-nāt, a Of or pertaining to the office, rank, or order of subdeacon sub"di-ac'o-nal‡.

sub"di-ac'o-nate, n The office, rank, or order of subdeacon [< LL subdiaconus, see SUBDEACON] sub'di"al, 1 sub'dai'əl 2 sŭb'di'al a [Rare] Pertaining to or being in the open air situated under the open heaven [< L subdialis, < sub, under, + dirum, sky] sub"di-ti'tiousŧ, a Put secretly in the place of something else foisted in [has been already diversified sub"di-ver'si-fy, vt [Rare] To diversify after the object sub"di-vide', 1 sub'di-vaid', 2 sŭb'di-vīd', v I t To divide a part or the parts resulting from the previous division of, as, the human race is divided into stocks and subdivided into varieties II i 1. To become further divided after being divided, or to become divided after being itself the result of a division 2. [Rare] To separate or become dissociated sub"di-vide', n Geol A divide between the tributaries of a main stream; a subordinate divide sub"di-vis'i-bl(es', 1 sub'di-viz'i-bl, 2 sŭb'di-vĭz'i-bl, a Capable of being subdivided, susceptible of subdivision sub"di-vi'sion, 1 sub'di-viz'ən, 2 sŭb'di-vĭzh'on, n 1. The act or process of subdividing, division following upon division so as to produce parts of parts 2. A part resulting from subdividing, a part of a division, in botany and zoology, a subordinate division or group Syn. see BRANCH, PART — sub"di-vi'sion-al, a

— to sugar off [U S & Canada], to pour (concentrated maple-sirup) into molds to granulate sug'ar, n 1. A sweet crystalline compound ($C_{12}H_{22}O_{11}$) derived chiefly from the juice of the sugar-cane and sugar-beet, but contained also in many other plants.

Sugar is called, according to its source, beet-sugar, cane-s , date or palm-s , grape-s , maize-s , maple-s , melon-s , sorghum-s , etc Cane-sugar is the principal member of the disaccharose group (See def 2) It melts at 160° C , at 200° C forms caramel In manufacture the juice is extracted from the material, as by passing the sugar-cane through a mill, and is then treated with lime or some similar defecator and boiled, mostly in vacuum-pans, thus removing impurities and concentrating the cleansed juice It is then allowed to stand to permit crystallization, after which the crystals are separated from the sirupy residue (see MOLASSES) by draining The first result of this process is the highest grade, known as first sugar or firsts, the molasses is then boiled and an inferior quality of sugar extracted called second s or seconds, and a dark brown quality obtained after extracting the residue is third s or thirds. The crude product, called raw, brown, or muscovado sugar, is sent to the refinery, where it is further purified by solution and filtration through cotton bags afterwards through animal charcoal, and boiled down in a vacuum-pan to recrystallization, yielding a refined sugar, which is dried in a centrifugal machine It is then sold according to its condition as, crushed s. (loaf sugar broken into irregular pieces), cube s or cut s (loaf sugar cut or molded into regular blocks), granulated s (formed into grains or separate crystals by stirring while crystallizing), loaf s (molded into a compact mass of crystals), lump s , powdered s , pulverized s , etc See illus on next page

The food value of sugar is well defined It furnishes next to oil and fat the most complete food for heat and energy that can be consumed ranking of course as starch in this particular H W WILEY Foods and Their Adulteration p 472 [P B & CO '11]

2 Chem Any of many sweet or sweetish carbohydrates which are ketonic or aldehydic derivatives of the higher alcohols They are classed as monosaccharids disaccharids and trisaccharids the monosaccharids being again divided into tetroses, pentoses, etc They include glucose, cane sugar, lactose etc Sugars are found in both the vegetable and animal kingdoms and are soluble in water, optically active, and subject to fermentation They were formerly divided into the glucose group (the monosaccharids) and the saccharose group (the disaccharids)

3. Any substance resembling sugar, especially in its taste, as, sugar of lead (see phrases) 4. Flattering words, language or conduct intended to be very grateful and pleasant to another, honeyed speech, especially if employed to disguise or soften a severe reality 5. [Slang, Austral] Spot cash, ready money [< F. sucre, < LL succarum, < Gr sakchar, < Ar sakkar, < Per shakar, < Prakrit sakkara, < Sans çarkarā, sugar]

Diagram of Apparatus used in the Manufacture of Sugar from Sugar-cane

The cane-carrier (1) delivers the sugar-cane to the cane-mill (2), the bagasse being taken away by the carrier (3) while the juice flows to the straining-tank (4) Thence it is pumped up to the raw-juice tank (5) from which the defecators (as 6) are supplied The clear liquid after defecation is discharged into the filtering-tank (7), and the scum and other refuse is carried away by the canal (8). From the filtering-tank the juice is pumped into the first pan (9) of the three pans constituting the triple effect and part of the water is evaporated. Thence it is led to the second pan (10) and thence to the third pan (11). In each successive pan a portion of the water is evaporated 9 is heated by steam from the drum (12) and the vapor arising from the juice is led to 10 and supplies the heat for further evaporation In like manner the vapor from 10 is utilized in 11. The latter is connected with the condenser (13) where the best possible vacuum is maintained. 14 is the hot-well 15 vapor-pipe 16 injection-pipe 17 air-pipe A large percentage of the water in the juice is evaporated in the triple effect leaving the sirup as it is then called at 18 in a much-concentrated condition The sirup is then clarified at 19 by boiling and skimming and passes to the tank (20) the refuse going off in the canal (21) This clarified sirup then passes to the vacuum-pan (22) where the final evaporation takes place When evaporated to the point of crystallization the valve (23) is opened and the sugar is discharged into the mixer (24) where it is stirred by revolving paddles From the mixer small quantities are taken into the centrifugal baskets (25) say 200 or 300 pounds to each basket for each charge The baskets are then rotated rapidly the molasses being thereby drained quickly from the sugar leaving clear crystals of sugar almost white in color, and ready for the refiner

Syn.: hint, innuendo insinuation, intimation A suggestion brings something before the mind less directly than by formal or explicit statement as by a partial statement, an incidental allusion an illustration, a question or the like Suggestion is often used of an unobtrusive statement of one's views or wishes to another, leaving consideration and any consequent action entirely to that person's judgment, and is hence, in many cases, the most respectful way in which to convey one's views to a superior or a stranger. A suggestion may be given unintentionally, and even unconsciously, as when we say an author has "a suggestive style." An intimation is a suggestion in brief utterance, or sometimes by significant act, gesture or token of one's meaning or wishes, in the latter case it is often the act of a superior as, God in his providence gives us intimations of his will. A hint is still more limited in expression, and is always covert, but frequently with good intent, as to give one a hint of danger or of opportunity Insinuation and innuendo are used in the bad sense an insinuation is a covert or partly veiled injurious utterance sometimes to the very person attacked, an innuendo is commonly secret as well as sly, as if pointing one out for opprobrium —collective suggestion (Psychol.), a suggestion which affects simultaneously a number of minds by whom it is received —negative s., hypnotic suggestion with a view to diminishing or suppressing sensation, perception, self-control, or other positive powers of the subject In certain cases it may be carried to the extreme of making it impossible for the hypnotized person to see plainly visible objects, etc —principle of s., same as ASSOCIATION OF IDEAS —relative s., the capacity of feeling relations, as resemblances, differences or proportion when two objects or ideas are perceived a term used formerly by associationalists, especially by Dr Thomas Brown virtually equivalent to psychological judgment —simple s., association of ideas, as distinguished from relative suggestion —spontaneous s. 1. Involuntary association of ideas 2 The arising of ideas without any conscious process of association —s. on the record (Law), the entry upon the record of a case of some essential fact, as the death or insolvency of a party which puts an end to the suit in its existing form —terminal s., post-hypnotic suggestion see under HYPNOTISM sul'phur, } sulfur or with sulfurous acid, as a wine-cask before filling (to prevent acetous fermentation), or plants (to cure or prevent mildew), or a hive (to kill the bees of a colony, or to destroy worms in the honeycomb) sul'fur, } n Chem 1. A pale-yellow non-metallic sul'phur, } crystalline element found largely native, and then crystallizing in the orthorhombic system

Sulfur exists in several allotropic forms, of which the more important are the two crystalline modifications one orthorhombic and the other monoclinic, both of which are soluble in carbon disulfid, and an amorphous modification that is insoluble in carbon disulfid When viscid sulfur is poured into cold water it assumes a temporary elastic or plastic condition Sulfur in its chemical relations is the representative of oxygen, to which it is equivalent, atom to atom. The two elements, tho very dissimilar in their ordinary physical characters, correspond very closely in the nature of the compounds which they form, and in the properties they exhibit when both are in the gaseous state Sulfur burns with a blue flame, producing sulfur dioxid It is used in the arts in making gunpowder, matches, vulcanized rubber, and sulfuric acid, and also in medicine, especially in skin-diseases Pliny says that when sulfur is burned in darkness it gives the faces of the attendants the pallor of death hence it was used in certain religious ceremonies, and called thion (hence, thionic acids) In alchemy it was regarded as an elementary principle, the others being salt and mercury See def 4

The great repositories of sulphur are either beds of gypsum and the associate rocks or the regions of active and extinct volcanoes In the valley of Noto and Mazzaro, in Sicily . [and] Cracow, in Poland, it occurs in the former situation . Sicily and the neighboring volcanic isles the Solfatara near Naples the volcanoes of the Pacific Ocean, e g Kilauea on Hawaii, etc are localities of the latter kind DANA Mineralogy p 9 [w & s '09]

Near Lake Charles at Sulphur [Louisiana], are very extraordinary sulphur deposits The beds lie several . hundred feet underground and are of disputed origin The sulphur is dissolved by superheated water forced down pipes and the water with sulphur in solution is forced upward by hot air pressure through other pipes the sulphur comes 99 per cent pure to the surface of the ground where it is cooled in immense bins and then broken up and loaded directly upon cars for shipment Encyc Brit 11th ed vol xvii p 54

Later it was made from sulfur itself, and more recently from certain mineral sulfids Sulfur dioxid (SO_2) is generated by burning the sulfur or sulfid in air, while at the same time nitrogen tetroxid (N_2O_4) is generated by decomposing sodium nitrate with sulfuric acid and heat The two gases are caused to react with steam in leaden chambers The resulting sulfuric acid, which at this stage is called chamber acid, and has a specific gravity of 1 35 to 1 62, is further concentrated in glass or platinum stills until a density of 1 84 is reached Sulfuric acid is also manufactured by a contact process in which platinum is the catalytic agent, the sulfur dioxid produced in the burners being passed over heated platinum where it combines with oxygen to form sulfur trioxid which in turn produces sulfuric acid when absorbed in water The commercial value of sulfuric acid is largely due to its energy in attacking and decomposing almost everything with which it comes in contact It readily dissolves most metals, decomposes most salts, forming sulfates, absorbs moisture being thus valuable as a desiccating or dehydrating agent, and chars nearly all animal and vegetable substances, whence its use in making shoe-blacking Antidote alkalis, lime-water, or soda monohydrated s. acid‡. — s. anhydrid, same as SULFUR TRIOXID See SULFUR — s. chloranhydrid, sulfuryl chlorid — s ether, ordinary or ethyl ether a name due to the use of sulfuric acid in its manufacture, tho it contains no sulfur See ETHER, n , 1

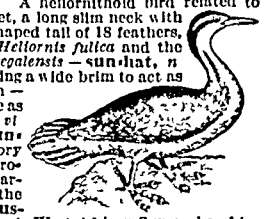
2. To shine like the sun

sun¹, n 1. The heavenly body that is most conspicuous from the earth, being the center of attraction and the main source of light and heat in the solar system: regarded by astronomers as a star

The sun's mean distance from the earth is nearly 92 830,000 miles and its diameter 864,000 miles The surface is 12,000 and the volume 1,300 000 times that of the earth, but the mass is only 332,000 times as great, so that the density is only about one-quarter that of the earth The period of rotation is 25 3 days at the equator, 25 8 days at latitude 20°, 27 0 days at latitude 40°, as determined by the movement of sun-spots tho recent determinations show that there is a peculiar surface-drift in the sun-spot belts The sun's surface, the photosphere, has a gray background thickly covered with granular or cloud-like forms called nodules or rice-grains It is indented at certain latitudes within the belt included between the 40th parallels of north and south latitude by irregular spots (See SUN-SPOT) Above this layer comes the chromosphere, in the midst of which is the reversing layer where the Fraunhofer lines are supposed to originate Explosive projections of the lower material into fantastic shapes cause the prominences, distinguished as quiescent or metallic according to their character The faculæ (see FACULA) are found in all parts of the sun, especially around the spots and seem to be highly attenuated condensations like clouds Beyond all these, extending to great visible distances, is the corona, observed only during total eclipses (See CORONA) The material of the sun, as revealed by the spectrum, has many of the chemical elements known on the earth, and others not known to have counterparts here It is generally believed that the sun has an influence on terrestrial magnetism, and facts have been adduced to show that the polar magnetic field of the sun, following the stream-lines visible in the corona, reaches the earth and there affects the earth's magnetism



2. Any star that is the center of a system revolving around it, as Sirius, also, either of the components of a double star 3. The light and heat radiated from the sun, sunshine, as, let us sit for a while in the sun. 4. Figuratively, anything brilliant and magnificent, or that is a source of splendor, a glorious or resplendent object, as, Christ is the sun of righteousness (Mal iv 2). 5. [Poet] The time of the earth's revolution round the sun, a year 6. The daily appearance or daily shining of the sun, a day, also, the time of its appearance or shining, sunrise, as, twenty suns ago, wait not for tomorrow's sun 7. Her The sun's disk, sometimes represented as a human face environed by rays alternately straight and wavy usually described as proper, or in its glory or splendor (surrounded by wavy rays), and commonly blazoned or unless otherwise specified See illus under HURST su"per-phos'phate, n Chem An orthophosphate, as that of calcium, in which only a portion of the replaceable hydrogen of the original orthophosphoric acid has been substituted by a basic radical — superphosphate of lime, a soluble compound, $CaH_4(PO_4)_2$, made by heating calcium orthophosphate, $Ca_3(PO_4)_2$, with sulfuric acid used extensively as a fertilizer su"per-phys'i-cal, a Same as SUPERORGANIC — su"per-plant"t, n A plant growing upon another an epiphyte, a parasite — su"per-plus't, n A surplus — su'per-plus"age†, n Surplusage su"per-pose', 1 sū'pər-pōz', 2 sū"per-pōş', vt To lay over or upon something else, as one layer upon another; specif, in geometry, to suppose (a figure) to be placed upon another See SUPERIMPOSE, SUPERPOSITION [< F superposer, < L super, over, and see POSE¹, v]

— su"per-pos'a-bl(e⁵, a That can be superposed superimposable — su"per-posed', pa 1 Placed directly over some other part or organ as buds or flowers on a stem or stamens opposite the petals 2. Geol Same as SUPERIMPOSED (when either term is applied to natural drainage) su"per-po-si'tion, n The act of superposing, or the state of being superposed Specif (1) Bot Same as ANTEPOSITION. (2) Geom The act of supposing one figure to be taken up and laid upon another so as to demonstrate that they are or are not equal by showing that they do or do not coincide perfectly (3) Eccl A fast superimposed upon another, the continuation or extension of a fast (4) Geol (a) The original relative position of strata, each newer formation overlying the next older one in any locality. (b) Superimposition [< I L superpositio(n-), < L superpono, place over, < super, over + pono, place] — apparent superposition, the actual or visible order in which strata lie in any locality In case of overturn this is a false superposition, as the older rocks have been thrust over the newer ones. — law of s, the law that underlying must be older than overlying strata where there has been neither inversion nor overthrust Upon this law all geological chronology is based su"per-quad"ri-par'ti-ent, a Being in the ratio of 9 to 5 su"per-quad"ri-quin'tal† — su"per-ra'di-al, a Applied to the upper piece of a radial plate transversely bisected, as in certain crinoids, e g, Haplocrinus su"per-ra'tion-al, etc See SUPER-su"per-re-flec'tion†, n The reflection of a reflection — su"per-ros'tral, a Situated above the rostrum or beak as, a superrostral spine — su"per-roy'al, a Larger than royal said of paper of a certain size See PAPER — su"per-sa'cral, a Situated dorsally from the sacrum su"per-sa'lient†, a [Rare] Leaping upon something — su"per-sa'lien-cy, n — su'per-salt", n Chem An acid salt See ACID, a su"per-sat'u-rate, vt To saturate to excess or beyond the normal point, cause to contain more of something, as of a dissolved substance or of magnetism, than can be held under normal conditions

— supersaturated solution (Chem), the solution of a salt in a liquid carried beyond the normal degree of saturation A slight jar or the addition of more salt to such a solution will suddenly produce crystallization

Supersaturated solution of sodium acetate is used in railway foot-warmers where the heat evolved in the crystallisation renders it four times as efficacious as the same volume of hot water BLOXAM Chemistry ¶ 38 p 44 [P B & CO 1890]

su"per-sat"u-ra'tion, n The act or process of supersaturating or the state of being supersaturated, specif, the state of the air when it contains an amount of moisture more than sufficient to saturate it, as in a fog — magnetic supersaturation, the state of having received more magnetism than can be retained for a time su"per-scap'u-la, n The separately developed vertebral border of the scapula — su"per-scap'u-lar, a Situated above the scapula suprascapular — su"per-sec'u-lart, a Elevated above or superior to the mundane and secular su"per-scribe', 1 sū'pər-skraib', 2 sū"per-scrib', vt [-SCRIBED', -SCRIB'ING] To write or engrave on the outside or on the upper part of, inscribe with a name or address, furnish with an inscription, specif, to address or direct, as a letter [< L superscribo, see SUPERSCRIPT] sur-cur'rent, 1 sûr-kur'ent, 2 sûr-cŭr'ĕnt, a Bot Having the winged expansions of a leaf or its petiole running upward on a stem, instead of downward as in a decurrent leaf Compare DECURRENT [< SUR- + CURRENT, a] surd, 1 sûrd, 2 sûrd, vt To soften the sound of, as a vibrating string, render dim, mute surd, a 1. Math Incapable of being expressed in rational numbers, irrational, as, a surd quantity 2. Phon Produced by the organs of speech without voice or tone, not vocal or sonant, atonic See SURD, n 3. [Archaic] Destitute of hearing, deaf 4†. Such as can not be heard, unheard 5†. Devoid of meaning or sense [< L surdus, deaf] surd'al†.

surd, n 1. Math (1) An irrational number or quantity, especially an indicated root that can not be extracted, as $\sqrt{2}$ (2) In later usage, an indicated root whose value is irrational, but whose radicand is rational 2. Phon A consonant sound made with the vocal cords apart so that they do not produce voice or tone, as p, t, s, or k opposed to a sonant as b, d, z, g — similar surds (Math), surds reducible to those of the same order with the same radicands — sur-da'tion, n Phon The act of changing a sonant into a surd sur'de-lin(eˢ, n Same as SOURDELINE sur-dent', 1 sûr-dent', 2 sûr-dĕnt', n A first tooth remaining after second dentition, and crowded aside by the new tooth, a superfluous tooth [< SUR- + L den(t-)s, tooth] sur"de-sol'id, 1 sûr'di-sol'id, 2 sûr de-sŏl'id, a Of four dimensions of the fourth degree [< SUR- + DE- + SOLID] sur"di-mut'ism, 1 sûr'di-miūt'izm, 2 sûr'di-mūt'iṣm, n Pathol The condition of being deaf and dumb [< L surdus, deaf, + MUTE, a] sur'di-ny†, n A sardine surd'ism, 1 sûrd'izm, 2 sûrd'iṣm, n Deafness in infants so serious as to be usually accompanied by dumbness surd'i-ty, 1 sûrd'i-ti, 2 sûrd'i-ty, n 1. The state or quality of being surd; lack of sonant quality 2. Pathol Deafness [< L surditā(t-)s, < surdus, deaf] sur'do-mute", 1 sûr'do-miūt', 2 sur'do-mūt', n A deaf and dumb person sure, 1 shûr, 2 shur, a [SUR'ER, SUR'EST] 1. Not liable to change or failure, certain to be, to continue to exist, or to take place, stable, infallible, as, a sure dependence, a sure shot, death is sure to come 2. Fit, proper, or deserving to be depended upon, that may be confidently depended upon or expected, reliable, trustworthy

The testimony of the Lord is sure Ps XIX, 7

3. Absolutely or approximately certain, as of a fact or truth, or of one's position or ground, free from doubt, certain, positive, of future events, free from fear of being disappointed, not distrustful or apprehensive, as, I am sure he tells the truth, one is sure of what one sees

I am sure that I think although I may not be sure of that about which I think
E H CHAPIN Lessons of Faith and Life p 207 [JAS M 1877]

4. Certain of obtaining, attaining, or retaining something with of, as, to be sure of a living 5. [Archaic] Free from peril or danger, safe, secure, as, sure in one's castle 6†. Real, true, genuine 7†. Pledged to marry, betrothed [< F sûr, < L securus see SECURE, a] SYN: actual, assured, aware, certain, clear, confident, indisputable, infallible, positive real See AUTHENTIC AWARE FAITHFUL SECURE — as sure as a gun, or as s. as shooting [Slang], perfectly certain to happen — be s [Colloq] 1. See TO BE SURE 2. Be certain as, be sure to obey me — sure'-e-nough'. I a [Local, U S] Real genuine II. adv Surely — s -footed, a Not liable to fall or stumble, figuratively, not liable to err — s -footedly, adv — s.-footedness, n — to be s [Colloq], indeed, certainly — to have a s thing [Slang], to have a certainty be sure, beyond a doubt of obtaining or succeeding in a thing — to make s. 1 To make certain, secure so that there can be no failure as make your salvation sure 2†. To betroth — sure'ness, n sure, adv [Colloq or Obs] 1 Surely certainly 2†. Securely sur'ed-ly† — sure'-set", a Securely or firmly established — sure'ful-ly†, adv Carefully safely sure'ly, 1 shûr'li, 2 shur'ly, adv 1. In a sure manner, without doubt, certainly sometimes so used as to raise a question regarding a possibility of the opposite and so to suggest doubt, as, surely you are not going to do it! Compare DOUBTLESS

As surely as Christ has risen so surely shall believers be saved
C HODGE On Romans p 103 [W M 1858]

2. Without peril or danger, securely, safely sure'ment†, n Security for payment surety su'res, 1 sû'rēs, 2 su'rɛs n pl [Sp Am] Southerly winds of the coasts of Chile and Peru When accompanied by mist or fog they are called sures pardos, gray south winds sures'by†, n One who may be depended on sure'by†.

Su"resnes', 1 sû'rɛn', 2 sû rɛn', n A western suburb of Paris su-rette', 1 siu-ret', 2 sû-rĕt' n A West-Indian and Brazilian tree (Byrsonima spicata) whose bark (Muruxi bark) is used for tanning and dyeing Its edible but astringent berries are used in dysentery [< F suret, dim of sur, SOUR] sure'ty†, vt To pledge or offer as surety for sure'ty, 1 shûr'ti, 2 shur'ty, n [SURE'TIES, 1 -tiz, 2 -tiṣ, pl] 1. A person who engages to be responsible for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another, guarantor, bail

The words surety and guarantor are often used promiscuously, but in English and American law a surety technically is one who immediately becomes liable on any default of his principal, while a guarantor becomes liable only when the principal is unable to perform Bail is one who becomes surety for another in a civil or a criminal proceeding

A surety is discharged by the extinguishment of the principal obligation by payment or performance, by tender of payment by principal and refusal to receive it by creditor, by release of the principal unless he has securities of debtor and then he is only liable to the amount of their value Discharge of a co-surety discharges a surety to the amount entitled to contribution from the former Nelson's Perpetual Encyc 1911, p 555

2. A pledge of money deposited or of credit given to secure against loss or damage, security for payment or performance 3. That which gives security or confidence, ground or basis of certainty or security 4. The state of being sure, sureness, certainty, as, the inward surety of salvation 5 [Archaic] A sponsor 6†. Security, safety 7†. Confirmation, proof, warrant [< F sûreté, < L securita(t-)s, see SECURITY] SYN.: see CERTAINTY — of a surety [Archaic], surely, certainly — s. for good behavior, a recognizance, with sureties entered into before a magistrate by a person "not of good fame" for good behavior — s of the peace, an obligation binding a person to keep the peace sure'ty-ship, 1 shûr'ti-ship, 2 shur'ty-ship, n. Law 1. The liability, contract, or undertaking of one who becomes a surety 2. The relation in which a person stands toward one for whom he has become bound as surety sure'ti-ship‡.

sur-ex'ci-ta'tion, n [Rare] Excessive excitation surf, 1 sûrf, 2 sûrf, n The swell of the sea, that breaks upon a shore, the disturbed and surging condition of water where it meets the land [Var of SOUGH¹ from the sound of the billows] — surf'-bird", n An aphrizoid plover-like bird (Aphriza virgata) of the Pacific coast of America from Alaska to Chile, having the bill shorter than the tarsus, and the tail emarginate — s board, n A coffin-lid-shaped board, six to nine feet long, used by Hawaiians in the sport of surf-riding — s -boat, n A boat of extra strength and buoyancy, for passing through surf — s -boatman, n One who manages or aids in handling a surf-boat — s -clam, n A large mactroid bivalve found on sandy coasts, especially Mactra or Spisula solidissima, common on the Atlantic coast of the United States — s -coot, s -duck, n One of various scoters or sea-ducks (genus Œdemia), especially the surf-scoter — s -fishing, n Fly-fishing by casting from the beach into the surf — s.-scoter, n A surf-duck especially the North-American Œdemia perspicillata The adult male is black with a white spot on the forehead and the nape See illus under SCOTER — s.-shiner, n A small surf-fish (Cymatogaster aggregatus), the most common of the viviparous holconotids of the North-American Pacific coast sparada — s -smelt, n An argentinoid fish about a foot long (Hypomesus olidus), found on the Pacific coast of the United States — s -whiting, n A sciænoid fish, the silver whiting (Menticirrus littoralis) — s -worn, a Worn by the action of surf, as, a surf-worn shore sur'face, 1 sûr'fis, 2 sûr-faç, vt [SUR'FACED, SUR'FACING] 1. To put a surface on, give a (particular kind of) surface to, especially, to give a smooth or even surface to, as lumber, make smooth, even, or plane 2. To mine near the surface, as in placer-mining sur'face¹, n 1. The exterior part of anything that has length, breadth, and thickness, the outside of a body, superficies, exterior

I chose my wife as she did her wedding gown not for a fine glossy surface, but for such qualities as would wear well
GOLDSMITH Vicar of Wakefield p 1 [H M & CO]

2. Geom A two-dimensional space-form, that which at every point has continuous extension in two dimensions and no more, having length and breadth, but not thickness 3. That which is apparent on a slight examination or without examination, external view or appearance, as, his thoughts did not lie on the surface

We talk and think upon the surface Few of us examine the major premises of half our conclusions FROUDE Short Studies, Party Politics in third series p 325 [S 1877]

4. In steam-engineering, a portion exposed to heat, especially, the combined area of the walls of the tubes or flues in a boiler used instead of heating-surface, tube-surface, etc 5. That portion of the side of a fortification which is bounded by the angle of the nearest bastion and the prolongation of the flank 6. Railroad Normal level, as of the track [F, < sur- (see SUR-), and see FACE¹, n] — adjusting surface (Aero) that portion of an aeroplane wing, usually at the end, serving to adjust lateral balance of the machine commonly restricted to a surface not under command of a controlling device — algebraic s, a surface represented by an algebraic equation — applicable s, any surface that may be applied to another surface so as to touch it in all parts merely by bending, without tearing or stretching — balancings (Aero), such surface of an aerial vehicle as aids in steering or securing stability — bilateral s. (Math), an ordinary surface with two faces or aspects, such that a point, to pass in continuous motion from any location on either face to the point corresponding on the other face, must cut through the surface or pass the boundary, like a part of a spherical or cylindrical surface bifacial s ‡ — central s, a surface having a center, as that of a sphere or an ellipsoid — Clifford's s, in simple elliptic Riemannian space, the locus of points at a constant distance from a given axis Clifford-Klein s ‡ — conical s, a surface generated by the motion of a straight line having one point fixed and constantly intersecting a curve — developable s (Math), a surface that can be unrolled upon a plane developable‡.— doubly connected s, a surface in which two paths joining two points may be drawn so that they can not be made to coincide with each other by continuous variation, tho all other paths can be reconciled with one or the other of these, as an anchor-ring opposed to singly connected s, in which all the lines that can be drawn between two points can be made to coincide by continuous variations of the lines — equipotential s, a surface every point of which is at the same potential and which cuts lines of force at right angles level s ‡ — faying s., see FAY¹, v — isobaric s. (Meteor), a surface in the atmosphere every point of which is under the same barometric pressure — isodynamic s., a surface of equal force cutting all force-lines in a field at right angles — Kummer's s. (Math), a quartic surface having 16 conic points and 16 singular tangent planes — minimal s., a surface satisfying given conditions and having a minimum area — polar s., reciprocal s., a surface tangent to all the polar planes of the points of another surface, and vice versa — Riemann's s, a surface consisting of an indefinite number of plane sheets, which are connected chainwise by cross-lines, so that the first is connected only with the second, the second with the third, and so on, there being no direct connection except between consecutive sheets It represents an n-valued function — ruled s., a surface generated by the motion of a right line — sur'face-bee"tle, n A whirligig, gyrinid — s.-car, n. A car run on a surface-road — s -conduction, n Physics. The rate of the loss of heat from a body, depending upon the condition of its surface, whether polished or blackened — s -contact system, a method of taking power for electric street-cars by suitable contact of the car with studs or plates set at intervals between the rails each making and breaking the circuit as the car passes over it — s -current, n A distinct current of superficial depth at the surface of a body of water — s.-density, n Elec The density of an electric charge per unit-area — s.-energy, n Energy residing in the surface, as of a liquid, as distinguished from that within the mass — s -flow, n Geol 1. A spreading over the surface (of the earth), as by molten lava 2 An overflow of lava, as distinguished from an intercalated sheet or a dyke — s.-friction, n Naval Arch Frictional resistance See RESISTANCE — s -gage, n Mach A gage for laying off work, usually from a plane surface — s -glaze, n Ceram A thin and perfectly transparent glaze over both the body and the decoration — s -grinder, n A grinding-machine having a plate or table adjusted for holding an object true while the surface is ground — s grub, n A cutworm — s -integral, n The integral, taken over a surface, of any differential that has a continuously varying value over that surface — s -mining, n Mining at or near the surface placer-mining — s -motion, n Motion at the surface — s. of buoyancy, the locus of the center of buoyancy in a floating body in motion — s. of centers, a surface that is the locus of the centers of curvature of a given surface — s. of flotation (Statics) the envelop of all a body's planes of flotation — s of rectification (Geom), a torse formed of the lines of rectification of a curve — s. of revolution, a surface generated by a curve revolving about an axis — s -plane, n A machine for dressing or smoothing lumber a surfacer s.-planer†.— s -plate, n 1. A plate having a very accurate surface used for testing other surfaces 2 The table or plate of a surface-grinder — s -printing, n Printing from a relief surface, as distinguished from printing from an incised surface especially, the printing of cotton cloth from such a surface — s.-rib, n Arch A rib applied to the surface of vaulting, etc, merely as an ornament — s.-road, n A railroad on the surface of the ground distinguished from an elevated or an underground railroad — s -roller, n An engraved color-roller on a calico-printing machine See illus. under PRINT — s.-tension, n The tension of a liquid by virtue of which it acts as an elastic enveloping membrane, tending always to contract to the minimum area best exemplified in films freed from liquid masses, as in a soap-bubble, and in the formation of drops It is commonly explained as due to the fact that while molecules in the interior are attracted in all directions, and are thus in equilibrium, those on the surface have no neighbors outside to balance the attraction of those within and are consequently acted upon by a resultant force tending toward the interior — s.-towing, n [Rare] The work of collecting specimens in natural history from the surface of the sea, as distinguished from dredging — s.-traction, n Math The resultant of stresses exerted on part of a body by other portions, or by portions of other bodies, in contact with it over the part in question — s.-water, n Water on or from the surface of the ground, drainage-water, as distinguished from spring- or well-water — s -working, n Same as SURFACE-MINING — s.-worm, n A surface-grub — sustaining s. (Aero), any surface of an aeroplane set at a positive angle — thimble-s, n Ceram A decorative surface on Parian porcelains resembling the pitting on a thimble — twist-s, n A surface to any of whose plane-sections a rod can not be applied without twisting it — uniconsal s, a surface of zero deficiency, the coordinates of whose points may be expressed by rational functions of two parameters — unilateral or unifacial s, a surface with but one face and one edge, as that formed by pasting the edges of a strip together after a half twist Möbius s ‡.

Sur'face², n In Sheridan's School for Scandal, one of three characters (1) Charles, the younger of two brothers, a warm-hearted, good-natured, and fascinating scapegrace whose faults appeared on the surface the accepted lover of Maria Teazle (2) Joseph, brother of Charles, sentimental, artful and hypocritical any good in whose nature was entirely on the surface (3) Sir Oliver, wealthy uncle of Charles and Joseph Surface, who appears under the assumed name of Premium Stanley sur'faced, 1 sûr-fist, 2 sûr'façt, pa 1. Worked or brought to a particular kind of surface, especially to a smooth or even surface specifically applied to paper to which a smooth filling coat has been given, as by supersizing 2. Provided with a finishing surface-material, as a road — sur'faced-ly, adv

sur'face-ly, 1 sûr'fis-li, 2 sûr'faç-ly, adv Superficially sur'face-man, 1 sûr'fis-man 2 sûr'faç-măn, n [-MEN, pl] 1. Mining (1) A miner employed in an open-air working. (2) A laborer employed on surface-work 2 [Eng] A workman employed in keeping a railway-bed in repair sur'fac-er, 1 sûr'fis-er, 2 sûr'faç-er, n 1. A planing-machine for giving a true surface to lumber, having usually feed-rolls that carry the stuff under or between cutters rotating on horizontal axes, a surfacing-machine or surface-planer 2. A contrivance for preparing the surface of a railroad-tie to receive the tie-plate 3. One who smooths and levels a surface, as with a surfacing-machine

b bed c cutter-head pulley g feed-gear l ratchet lever for tightening the feed-belt that passes around (fb) w w, weights adjusting the top feed-roll (f).

Swe"den-bor'gi-an-ism, 1 swī'den-bōr'ji-an-izm, 2 swē'dĕn-bôr'gi-an-ĭzm, n The system of philosophy and theology taught by Emanuel Swedenborg, or developed from his writings, the doctrine, usages, organization and characteristics of Swedenborgians The most distinctive and controlling tenet of this system was its method of arriving at truth regarding reality As employed by Swedenborg himself, it consisted of the claim to a series of revelations by which immediate and indubitable intercourse with the spiritual world was thought to have been obtained This experience when generalized, established the "law of correspondences," according to which every material thing is known to have a spiritual side or spiritual thing corresponding to it According to this law, all the Scriptures admit of allegorical interpretation, with a view to discovering the spiritual principles of which the material world is the outgrowth and manifestation The resulting form of mysticism teaches that there are in things three degrees of being corresponding to three degrees of being in God — namely, love, or the celestial degree, wisdom, or the spiritual, and use or the natural — answering to end, cause, and effect The other leading doctrines of Swedenborgianism, as held by the New Jerusalem Church are (a) The Lord Jesus Christ is the one God of heaven and earth, in whom is the Divine Trinity, called in the Scripture Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, which is imaged in man by his soul, his body, and his proceeding life He took our nature upon Him, and by victories over the infernal hosts which by temptations assaulted its infirmities, he glorified it and subjugated hell, thus redeeming man (b) By looking to him and by shunning evils as sins against him, man accepts this redemption and is saved (c) The Sacred Scripture contains within its letter infinite Divine truth and is thus the Word of God, in heaven and on earth teaching the way of life, consociating men with angels, and conjoining all with the Lord (d) Man is an immortal spirit having a body of flesh which is laid aside at death, after which he wakes to consciousness in the spiritual world and, according to the life he has acquired on earth dwells in heaven as an angel or seeks an abode with his like in hell (e) The second coming of the Lord has already taken place It is not a coming in person, but is a revelation of him in the internal sense of his Word, and is the beginning of a new Christian church of divine promise, and a new era of enlightenment and progress among men

The first organization of Swedenborg's followers for public worship was in London in 1783 The Church is called by its members the New Church, or the New Jerusalem Church syl'lo-gism, 1 sil'o-jizm, 2 sy.l'o-gizm, n 1. A logical formula, or analysis of a formal argument, consisting of three propositions, the first two of which are called the premises, and the third the conclusion Fully expressed, then, a syllogism consists of (1) a major premise or rule (2) a minor premise or case and (3) a conclusion or application According to Aristotle and most writers on formal logic following him until recent times, the essence of this form of inference is that it states in one proposition truth involved in two non-relative propositions The inference must be necessary and contained in the premises, but it may be regardless of the truth of the premises and of the manner of their being known It is, according to Aristotle (Prt An I i) a sentence or thought in which, from something laid down and admitted, something distinct from what we have laid down follows of necessity

A syllogism is a combination of two judgments necessitating a third judgment as a consequence of their mutual relation MANSEL Prolegom Log 2d ed p 69 [CL P]

By the same writers the cogency of the argument, as found in the so-called middle term, has been defined as consisting in the principle that whatever can be affirmed of the whole can be affirmed of what has been shown to be a part of the whole, for example

All the mineral acids are poison,
Spirit of salt is a mineral acid,
Therefore it is a poison

If the reasoning is intensive, the principle which gives it cogency is that the mark of a mark is the mark of the thing itself Since Sextus Empiricus, it has been maintained by some writers that the syllogism is of no real value for the advance of thought and knowledge, because the conclusion is already contained in the premises And J S Mill especially emphasized the objection that the conclusion is really not contained in the premises until it (the conclusion) has been separately tested In view of these objections, and especially of the psychological facts of experience bearing upon the subject, there is now nearly universal agreement that this form of reasoning is neither strictly valid nor actually employed by the mind in reaching truth, although convenient and effective for testing or exposing the truth

As regards the form of these inferences it follows from what has been said that the only value of the syllogistic arrangement is to exhibit the structure of the reasoned judgment, which itself contains or displays the articulated universal

B BOSANQUET Logic vol II, p 188 [CL P 1888]

The solution (i e of the difficulty mentioned above) is found in frankly admitting that there is no inference within the limits of the syllogistic process itself but that the inference was secured in the act of obtaining the major premise The true original premises were the observed original facts

VENN Empirical Logic p 373 [MACM 1889]

Aristotle recognized three figures, or varieties, of the syllogism according as the middle term was the subject of the major and the predicate of the minor premise, or was the predicate of both or, finally, was the subject of both In addition to, and partly in dependence upon, these distinctions, several kinds of syllogisms came to be recognized by the earlier writers on formal logic, such as the categorical and hypothetical, the negative and positive, the complete and incomplete (enthymeme), the complex, where there is a principal syllogism to which all the rest are subordinate and the compound, where all are coordinate, the conditional and the disjunctive, etc (See these words) The theoretically possible number of syllogisms that might be made by varying all the different elements has been placed by some writers at 8,192 For the more important of the technical terms found in modern treatises on logic (such as didascalic syllogism, or one which generates science), and of which about 40 are in use, these treatises should be consulted sym'bol-ist, 1 sim'bəl-ist 2 sĭm'bol-ist, n 1. One who uses symbols; one versed in the interpretation or use of symbols, especially in religion. 2. One who practises symbolism.

sym"bol-is'tic, 1 sim'bəl-is'tik; 2 sĭm"bol-is'tic, a 1. Expressed by symbols characterized by the use of symbols 2 Of or pertaining to symbolism. sym"bol-is'ti-cal:.

sym'bol-ize, 1 sim'bəl-aiz; 2 sĭm'bol-iz, r [-IZED; -IZ'ING] I. t 1. To embody or represent symbolically, typify: said of the thing used as a symbol or emblem; as, the lamb symbolizes innocence 2. To represent by symbols 3. To make or consider symbolic, treat as figuratively representative 4. To formulate into a creed or confession of faith, as, the Council of Nicea symbolized the orthodox faith 5. [Rare] To make to agree in properties

II. i 1. To employ symbols, make use of symbolic representation. 2. To formulate creeds or beliefs 3. [Rare] To have or acquire a likeness, as in qualities, properties, faith, or doctrine, agree, harmonize [< F symboliser, < symbole see SYMBOL² r] sym'bol-ise; — sym"bol-i-za'tion-sa'tion, n — sym'bol-iz"er o'-is"er, n.

sym"bo"lo"fil'dē"is'me, 1 sim'bo"lo"fil'dī"is'me 2 sĭm'bo"lo"fil'dē"is'me, n [F] The theory that religious dogma consists of symbols in contrast to a scientific gnosis of reality sym-bol'o-gy, 1 sim-bol'o-ji; 2 sĭm-bŏl'o-gy, n The art of representing by symbols; also, a treatise on symbols. [< Gr. symbolon (see SYMBOL², n) — -LOGY] sym"bol-ol'o-gy:.— sym"bo-log'i-cal, a.— sym"bo-log'i-cal-ly, adv — sym-bol'o-gist, n.

sym"bol-ol'a-try, 1 sim'bəl-ol'ə-tri 2 sĭm'bol-ŏl'a-tri, n. Symbol-worship; superstitious veneration of symbols or religious creeds [< Gr symbolon (see SYMBOL², n.) — latreia see LATRIA] sym-bol'a-try:.

sym'bo-lon, 1 sim'bo-lon 2 sĭm'bo-lŏn, n. [Gr.] Gr Ch. 1. A creed 2. The eucharist 3. A bell. sym'bo-lum:.

sym'bo-lon:, n Same as SYMBOL². sym'bo-lum:

sym"bo-lo-pho'bi-a, 1 sim'bo-lo-fō'bi-ə 2 sĭm"bo-lo-fō'bi-ə, r Pathol A morbid dread lest one's actions should have a symbolical interpretation [< Gr. symbolon (see SYMBOL² n) — -PHOBIA] sym'bol-ry, 1 sim'bəl-ri 2 sĭm'bol-ry, n The use of symbols symbols collectively as heraldic symbolry

Sym-bor'o-don, 1 sim-bə"o-don 2 sĭm-bŏ"o-dŏn :. Paleon. A genus of fossil animals of the family Titanotheridæ. [< SYM- — Gr bora, devouring — odous tooth.]

Sym-bran'chi-i, 1 sim-bræŋ'ki-ai 2 sĭm-brăŋ'ki-ī, r pl Ich A suborder of eel-like fishes without paired fins and having the pectoral arch free They inhabit the waters of tropical America Australia, and Tasmania. [< SYM- — Gr branchia, gills] sym-cen'ter, 1 sim-sen'tər; 2 sĭm-cĕn'ter, r Geom A center of symmetry — sym-cen'tral, a Syme, 1 saim 2 sĭm, James (11 1799–4/11 1870). A Scottish surgeon Treatise or the Excision of Diseased Joints

Sym'e-on, 1 sim'i-ən 2 sĭm'e-on, r 1. Bib (R. V) Luke iii 30 2. Same as SIMEON 3. S. Metaphrastes, a Byzantine hagiographer, lived in the 10th century

Sy'mi, 1 sī'mi 2 sĭ'mi, r A gulf island and town of W Asia Minor The Symiots, or inhabitants of Symi, are skilful sponge-divers Sym'ing-ton, 1 sim'iŋ-tən 2 sĭm'ing-ton William (11/1763–4/11 1831) A Scottish inventor who was one of many who applied the steam-engine to purposes of navigation. In 1788 he successfully ran a steamboat, 25 feet long and 7 feet beam with paddle-wheels five miles an hour and in 1802 he first successfully operated the Charlotte Dundas," on the Forth and Clyde Canal towing two vessels of 70 tons each making over three miles an hour See STEAMBOAT

Sym-ma'chi-an, 1 si-mē'ki-ən, 2 sy-mā'ci-an, n. Ch Hist. One of a sect in Imperial Rome that taught a Persian asceticism attributed to Symmachus the Ebionite.

Sym'ma-chus, 1 sim'ə-kus 2 sĭm'a-cŭs r 1. A pope (—1/11514) who excommunicated the Emperor Anastasius. 2. A Roman orator (340–416) who defended paganism against St. Ambrose of Milan 3. A Christianized Jew who embraced the doctrine of the Ebionites translated the Old Testament into Greek (2d century A. D) sym'ma-chy, 1 sim'ə-ki, 2 sĭm'a-cy, n Ch. Hist. The doctrine of Symmachus the Ebionite. Compare SYMMACHIAN sym'ma-chy, r Gr Antiq An offensive and defensive alliance between states [< Gr symmachia] sym-me'di-an, 1 sim-mi'di-ən 2 sĭm-mē'di-an, a Math. Situated at the intersection of the three median lines of a triangle said of a point. [< SYM- — MEDIAN² a] sym-me'li-a, 1 si-mi'li-ə 2 sy-mē'li-a r Any form of monstrosity in which the limbs are united or blended together [< Gr symmēlia in unison, < syn together — melos limb] — sym-me'li-an, a.— sym'me-lus, n [-LI, pl] Terat. A monster whose lower extremities are united.

Symmes, 1 simz 2 sĭmz John Cleves (1780–4/11829) An American soldier who promulgated the theory that the earth is a hollow sphere habitable within He supposed that an aperture popularly known as Symmes's Hole, existed at 82° N lat.

sym-met'al-lism, 1 sim-met'əl-izm 2 sĭm-mĕt'al-izm r A money-standard composed of both gold and silver combined distinguished from bimetallism.

sym'me-tral, 1 sim'i-trəl; 2 sĭm'e-tral, a Of or pertaining to symmetry, symmetrical, commensurable.

sym-me'tri-an, n [Rare] A symmetrist.

sym-met'ri-cal, 1 si-met'ri-kəl, 2 sy-mĕt'ri-cal, a 1. Exhibiting symmetry; having harmonious proportions, well-balanced, regular, as, a symmetrical structure. 2 Math Exhibiting mathematical symmetry, as a figure, also, so situated with respect to some other figure or figures that all taken collectively show such symmetry 3. Biol Having parts or organs on one side corresponding to those on the other, having parts regularly arranged 4. Bot Regular as to number or shape of parts. said especially of a flower when the parts or divisions in each cycle (that is the sepals, petals stamens, and pistils) are of the same number or multiples of the same 5. Org Chem Denoting an arrangement of atoms of a molecule at equal relative intervals when graphically represented. [< F symétrique, < Gr. symmetrikos, < symmetria symmetry, < syn with + metron measure] sym-met'ric: — sym-met'ri-cal-ly, adv — sym-met'ri-cal-ness, n.

sym'me-trist, 1 sim'i-trist 2 sĭm'e-trist, n One who is studious of symmetry. sym"me-tri'cian: [Rare] sym'me-trize, 1 sim'i-truz, 2 sĭm'e-triz, rt [-TRIZED; -TRIZ'ING] To make symmetrical or proportional. sym-me-trise:.— sym"me-tri-za'tion-sa'tion, n sym'me-troid, 1 sim'i-troid 2 sĭm'e-trōid, n. Geom A surface of the fourth order whose equation is obtained by equating to zero a symmetrical determinant of that order whose elements are linear functions of homogeneous point coordinates [< Gr symmetria (see SYMMETRICAL) — -OID] sym"me-tro-pho'bi-a, 1 sim'i-tro-fō'bi-ə 2 sĭm"e-tro-fō'bi-ə, n. [Humorous] Dread or avoidance of architectural or structural symmetry, especially as shown in the temple-architecture of the Egyptians and in Japanese art

We find a remarkable instance of what Sir Gardner Wilkinson has ingeniously called the symmetrophobia of the Egyptians This court is bounded on one side by large columns, . . but on the other side, instead of similar columns we find massive stone pillars MARIETTE-BEY Monuments of Upper Egypt tr by A Mariette, pt. III, p 211 [TR. & CO 1877] sym'me-try, 1 sim'ı-trı; 2 sy̆m'e-try, n [-TRIES, 1 -trız; 2 -trıs, pl] 1. Due arrangement or balancing of the parts or elements of a whole with reference to one another in making up that whole, relative proportion and harmony, hence, loosely, congruity, consistency, harmony, also, an instance of such arrangement or balancing, as, the symmetries of Seneca 2. Esthetics The element of beauty in nature or art that results from such arrangement and balancing, perfection of related forms in the making up of a harmonious whole. In its lower form symmetry may involve only repetition, radiation, simple rhythm, or spacing, but in its higher forms it involves distribution, proportion, congruity and harmony, and free balancing of parts in relation to a totality or whole.

Akin to this beauty of proportion is the beauty of Symmetry, which is founded more immediately on the relation of the parts of one another H N DAY Æsthetics § 72, p. 76 [C C C 1872.]

3. Biol (1) Anat & Zool Regular arrangement of parts or organs so that a division will give similar halves, similarity of structure Symmetry appears in three forms bilateral, radial, and serial. See these words (2) Bot Equality of number in the whorls of a flower, as of sepals, petals, etc See SYMMETRICAL.

4. Math An arrangement of pairs of points in a general system such that the set of lines joining them together is divided into equal parts by a line (the axis of symmetry), or by a plane (plane of s), or by a point (the center of s.).

5. Crystal The symmetrical distribution of non-parallel but equivalent directions (faces, edges, etc) in a crystal with reference to certain planes or lines called planes or axes of symmetry The grade of symmetry is determined by the number of non-parallel equivalent directions which a given crystal possesses There are only thirty-two crystal classes possible having different grades of symmetry. 6. [Archaic] Beauty, comeliness, fine appearance. [< F symétrie, < L symmetria, < Gr symmetria; see SYMMETRICAL] Syn.: agreement, conformity, harmony, order, parity, proportion, regularity, shapeliness See HARMONY — Ant.: deformity, discordance, disproportion, shapelessness — axial symmetry, the symmetry produced when to every point or part of a body or figure on one side of a line called the axis of symmetry corresponds a like point or part at an equal distance on the other side of the line — cyclic s. (Alg), the property of remaining the same expression when the letters composing it are cyclically transposed, that is, the first for the second, the second for the third, and so on — kinetic s, equality of the moments of inertia of a body about all axes through the center of inertia — respective s, symmetry in which only the opposite sides are equal — right s., symmetry in which the lines joining corresponding points are at right angles to the plane or axis of symmetry — skew s, the symmetry of hemihedral crystals, as of the trapezohedral crystals of quartz — s as to a plane, the symmetry produced when every point or part on one side of a plane has a corresponding point or part at an equal distance on the other side sym'morph", 1 sim'mōrf" 2 sy̆m'mōrf", n A character differing in form from another or others, but standing for the same notion Compare HOMOMORPH [< Gr symmorphos, similar, < syn with, + morphē, form]

Sym'onds, 1 sim'əṅdz, 2 sy̆m'onds, John Addington (10/5 1840-4/11 1893) An English author, History of the Renaissance in Italy

Sym'ond's Har'bor. Same as MANAKOO sy'mon-fault", n Geol Same as SWELL, 8

By'mons, 1 sal'mənz, 2 sy̆'mons, n 1. Arthur (7/12 1865—), an English poet, editor, and literary critic, London Nights 2. Sir William Penn (7/17 1843–11/12 1899), an English general, descendant of William Penn, served in Burma and South Africa sym-pal'mo-graph, 1 sim-pal'mo-graf, 2 sy̆m-pal'mo-ġraf, n An instrument for the composition of two harmonic motions by means of a pendulum vibrating about two horizontal axes [< SYM- + Gr palmos, vibration, + -GRAPH]

sym"pa-thet'ic, 1 sim"pə-thet'ık, 2 sy̆m"pa-thĕt'ic, a 1. Pertaining to, resulting from, or attended by sympathy, expressive of sympathy, as, sympathetic aid, sympathetic verses 2. Having like feelings with another or others, susceptible of sympathy, sympathizing, as, a sympathetic person 3. Being in accord or harmony, concordant, congenial 4. Physiol Pertaining to, dependent upon, or proceeding from sympathy; as, sympathetic disturbance of an organ or a part, due to some morbid reaction of another organ primarily diseased 5. Suggestive of or acting as if through sympathy, as, sympathetic ink

And fire a mine in China here,
With sympathetic gunpowder
S BUTLER Hudibras pt II, can 3, l 296

6. Physics Produced, as a vibration, by accumulated impulses from another vibration of the same or harmonic period, of or pertaining to vibrations so produced, exhibiting resonance, as in acoustics, electricity, etc [< Gr sympathētikos, < sympatheia, sympathy, < syn, with; and see -PATHY] sym"pa-thet'i-cal‡.

— sympathetic headache, headache due to disturbance in some other part of the system — s. nerve, a nervous cord, formed of filaments derived from the spinal nerves, that connects a series of ganglia situated on either side of the spine — s. nervous system. 1. The nervous system formed by the sympathetic nerve with its ganglia, the branches which it sends to the viscera, and the plexuses which they form The sympathetic system embraces (1) a central part consisting of a series of ganglia situated each side of the spine and connected by a nervous cord, (2) nerves that pass from this chain to the viscera, and (3) plexuses formed by these nerves either about the vessels or within the substance of the viscera, which plexuses contain numerous small ganglia 2. A nerve branching from the cerebral ganglion in invertebrates, and believed to correspond to the sympathetic nerve-system of vertebrates — s. numbers, numbers supposed to have a natural tendency to occur together — s. powder, powder formerly supposed to have the property of curing a wound if applied to the weapon inflicting it or to a piece of the blood-stained garment. — s. sounds, sounds produced by sympathetic vibrations

— sym"pa-thet'i-cal-ly, adv — sym"pa-thet'i-cism, n. A tendency, especially if excessive or morbid, to sympathize with others — sym"pa-thet'i-cus, n [-CI, 1 -sai; 2 -ċi, pl] The sympathetic nerve sym'pa-thism, 1 sim'pə-thizm; 2 sy̆m'pa-thĭzm, n Direct and instantaneous communication of subjective sensations, as pain or emotions sym'pa-thist, 1 sim'pə-thist, 2 sy̆m'pa-tnĭst, n [Rare] A sympathizer, also, one susceptible to sympathism sym'pa-thize, 1 sim'pə-thaiz, 2 sy̆m'pa-thīz, v [-THIZED; -THIZING] I. ɪ 1. To be affected with feelings corresponding to the feelings of another, share the sentiments or mental states of another followed by with or in, as, the true critic must sympathize with the author, to sympathize in sorrow or joy. 2. To be stirred to some emotion or put in some mood deemed correspondent with external phenomena; be in harmony with or sensitive to outside influences; as, Wordsworth sympathized with the calm of nature

There are however, a few men and perhaps Shakspeare stands at their head who truly sympathize with something out of themselves H N HUDSON Lect. on Shakspeare vol I, lect. II, p 66 [B & SCR 1848]

3. To be affected in one part in consequence of the condition of another part, suffer sympathetically; the eyes sympathize with each other

The digestive organs, unfortunately, are the first to sympathize with any mental worry
N E YORKE-DAVIES in Annals of Hygiene Sept , 1893, p 534

4. [Colloq] To give expression to one's sympathy, as with another's grief or affliction; condole 5. To be concordant agree, harmonize. 6†. To have similar characters or qualities, be alike

II†. t 1. To have or feel sympathy with, share in 2. To form or contrive with congruity or consistency 3. To correspond or answer to [< F sympathiser, < L sympathia, see SYMPATHY] sym'pa-thiset. Syn.: see CONSOLE PITY — sym'pa-thiz"er or -this"er, n — sym'pa-thiz"ing-lı, adv

sym'pa-thy, 1 sim'pə-thı, 2 sy̆m'pa-thy, n [-THIES, 1 -thız, 2 -thıs, pl] 1. The quality or state of being affected with feelings correspondent in kind or correlative with those of another person, fellow-feeling

Sympathy is the universal solvent Nothing is understood without it ARTHUR HELPS Friends in Council first series, vol. I p 77 [HAS M]

2. Specif , a feeling of compassion for another's sufferings or evils, pity, commiseration; as, sympathy with the poor, all misfortune is a claim to sympathy 3. An agreement of affections, tastes, or inclinations, or a conformity of natural temperament, which makes persons agreeable to one another, harmony, accord, as, they are in sympathy with each other 4. Physiol (1) The relation of one organ or part with another more or less remote, through which an unaffected organ or part becomes secondarily disordered from disease existing in some other part without actual transmission of the morbific cause (2) The quality or state of transmitting certain physiological conditions of one person to others, as in hysteria, yawning, etc : distinguished from protopathy, or direct experience, etc. See SYMPATHISM 5. That quality of inanimate things by virtue of which they attract, influence, or tend toward one another, or are supposed to do so, affinity a sense once much used in alchemy and astrology, as, the sympathy of the lodestone for iron 6. Physics A relation between two bodies such that the vibration of one causes a sympathetic vibration of the other 7†. Correspondence, agreement, also, suggestive association [< L sympathia, < Gr sympatheia; see SYMPATHETIC]

Syn.: see BENEVOLENCE, PITY — Prep: sympathy with another in joy or grief, sympathy for the needy in their distress, sympathy between kindred spirits — organic sympathy (Psychol), the sympathetic feeling between those of the same species which is instinctive and unreflective — reflective s, the sympathy which results from reflection and is motived by moral and social considerations

a the sympathetic nerve or interganglionic cord b ciliary ganglion, c sphenopalatine ganglion d e f superior middle and inferior cervical ganglia g h greater and lesser splanchnic nerves i pharyngeal plexus k recurrent laryngeal nerve l bronchial plexus m cardiac plexus n esophageal plexus o coronary plexus p pneumogastric nerve q gastric plexus r solar plexus s superior mesenteric plexus t, aortic plexus u inferior mesenteric plexus v hypogastric plexus w hemorrhoidal plexus x bladder y vesical plexus.

sym'pel-mous, a Ornith Having the deep flexor tendons all in one prior to their extension to each of the four digits: opposed to schizopelmous syn-pel'mous‡. — sym-pep'sis, n The ripening of the humors of inflammation — Sym-pet'a-læ, n pl Bot Same as GAMOPETALÆ — sym-pet'a-lous, a Bot Having united petals, gamopetalous — sym"phe-nom'e-non, n [-E-NA, pl] A phenomenon resembling or accompanying another phenomenon exhibited by the same object — sym"phe-nom'e-nal, a

fpd flexor perforans digitorum flh, flexor longus hallucis I–IV first to fourth toes sym'phi-ly, 1 sim'fı-lı, 2 sy̆m'fi-ly, n Biol Commensalism with manifestation of mutual sympathy as in the case of some ants and other insects which are their welcome guests [< Gr symphilia, mutual friendship] sym'phi-lism‡. — sym'phi-lous, a sym-pho'ni-a, 1 sim-fō'nı-ə 2 sy̆m-fō'nı-a n 1. Same as SYMPHONY, 2 2. In ancient Greek music, concord consonance [L, < Gr. symphonia· see SYMPHONION] sym-phon'ic, 1 sim-fen'ık 2 sy̆m-fŏn'ic a 1. Of, pertaining to, or characterized by symphony, symphonious 2. Mus Pertaining to or resembling a symphony 3. Of the same sound as words, homonymous sym"pho-net'ic‡ — symphonic poem, an orchestral composition in symphonic style, illustrating a poetic idea, but not divided into separate movements.

sym-pho'ni-on, 1 sim-fō'nı-ən, 2 sy̆m-fō'ni-on, n A former musical instrument combining the characters of the pianoforte and the harmonium [< Gr symphōnia, symphony, < syn, together, + phōnē, sound] sym-pho'ni-ous, 1 sim-fō'nı-us, 2 sy̆m-fō'ni-ŭs, a 1. [Archaic] Marked by symphony, characterized by harmony of sound 2. Pertaining to a symphony, symphonic — sym-pho'ni-ous-ly, adv

sym'pho-nist, 1 sim'fo-nıst, 2 sy̆m'fo-nĭst, n. One who composes symphonies sym'pho-nize†, vt & ri To harmonize, bring into sympathy, agree sym'pho-nise.

sym'pho-ny, 1 sim'fo-nı, 2 sy̆m'fo-ny, n [-NIES, 1 -nız, 2 -nıs, pl] 1. A harmonious or agreeable mingling of sounds, whether vocal, instrumental, or both used figuratively of concord, harmony, or agreeable blending of any kind, as, symphonies in gray; a lyric symphony 2. Mus (1) A sonata for an orchestra (2) An instrumental prelude, interlude, or postlude; a ritornelle

' Symphonies, up to the 17th century, were instrumental passages thrown into relief in works where interest centered chiefly in the vocalization The development of orchestral overtures and ritornelli gave rise to that highest form of instrumental composition now known as the symphony. Haydn was the first to evolve the classic standard of four movements (generally designated as allegro, andante, scherzo, and finale) which Mozart and especially Beethoven developed to the highest perfection The greatest modern symphonists are Schumann and Brahms Liszt gave himself more freedom of form and movement, calling his productions symphonic poems. See SONATA

3†. One of several distinct musical instruments, as the virginal, hurdy-gurdy, or bagpipe [< F symphonie, < L symphoria, see SYMPHONIA] — pastoral symphony (fus), a movement suggesting manifestations of nature, such as trees, flowers, and stars, also country dwellers and their occupations, as for example, the watch of the shepherds in the Messiah — toy or kinder s, a symphony intended for performance on toy instruments.

Sym"pho-ri-car'pos, 1 sim'fo-rı-kār'pus, 2 sy̆m'fo-ri-cär'pŭs, n Bot A genus of shrubs of the family Caprifoliaceæ, having oval, downy leaves and short clusters of white or rose-colored flowers followed by fleshy white or red berries The best-known are the coralberry (S vulgaris), the wolfberry (S. occidentalis), and the widely cultivated snowberry (S racemosus) [< Gr symphoreō (see SYMPHORICARPOUS) + karpos, fruit] Sym"pho-ri-car'pus‡ sym"pho-ri-car'pous, 1 sim'fo-rı-kār'pus, 2 sy̆m'fo-ri-car'pŭs, a Bot Bearing several fruits clustered [< Gr symphoreō (< syn, together, + pherō, yield) + karpos, fruit] sym'pho-rol, 1 sim'fo-rōl or -rol 2 sy̆m'fo-rōl or -rŏl, n Pharm The sodium, lithium, or strontium salt of the sulfonic acid derivative obtained from caffein used as a diuretic and usually designated as symphorol-lithium or symphorol L, etc , according to the metal present [< Gr symphoros, useful, + -OL] sym"phy-an'ther-ous, a Bot Same as SYNANTHEROUS — sym"phy-car'pous†, a Bot Having confluent fruit

Sym'phy-la, 1 sim'fı-lə, 2 sy̆m'fy-la, n pl Entom An order or suborder of insects related to typical Thysanura, but resembling chilopods and having many abdominal legs, as Scolopendrellidæ [< Gr symphylos, of the same race, < syn, together, + phylon, clan, < phyō, produce] — sym'phy-lous, a sym-phyl'lous, 1 sim-fil'us, 2 sy̆m-fyl'ŭs, a Bot Same as GAMOPHYLLOUS [< SYM- + Gr phyllon, leaf] sym'phy-note, 1 sim'fı-nōt, 2 sy̆m'fy-nōt, a Conch. Soldered together at the hinge, as the valves of some river-mussels [< Gr symphyēs growing together (< syn, together, + phyō, grow), + nōton, back] sym'phy-o-, 1 sim'fı-o-, 2 sy̆m'fy-o- Derived from Greek (< syn, together, + phyō, grow) a combining form — sym"phy-o-ceph'a-lus, n Same as SYNCEPHALUS — sym"phy-o-gen'e-sis, n Bot The production of an organ or part by the union of elements previously separate — sym"phy-o-ge-net'ic, a — sym"phy-o-stem'o-nous, a Bot Having united stamens, monadelphous. sym"phy-stem'o-nous‡.

sym'phy-sis, 1 sim'fı-sıs, 2 sy̆m'fy-sis, n [-SES, 1 -sız; 2 -sēs, pl] 1. Anat (1) The union of two parts of the skeleton, either by growing together (synostosis) or by the intervention of cartilage (synchondrosis) also, the place of union of such parts as, the symphysis pubis See illus under PELVIS (2) The union of parts normally separate. 2. Bot The coalescence or union of similar parts [< Gr. symphysis, union, < syn, together, + phyō, grow]

— symphysis menti, s of the jaw, or s mandibulæ, the point of union of the two halves of the lower jaw on the median line — sym-phys'e-al, a Of, pertaining to, or characteristic of symphysis or a symphysis sym'phy-salt; sym-phys'i-al‡; sym-phys'i-an‡, sym-phys'ic‡ — sym-physian angle, see CRANIOMETRY — sym-phys'e-o-tome, n Surg A knife especially adapted for the Sigaultian operation of cutting the pubic symphysis to facilitate labor — sy̆m-phys"e-ot'o-my, n Surg The operation of cutting through a symphysis, especially the symphysis pubis, to facilitate delivery when passage of the fetus is impossible without artificial intervention sym-phys"i-ot'o-my‡; sym"phy-sot'o-my‡. — sy̆m-phys'i-a, n A malformation produced by the union of parts normally separate — sym-phys'i-on, n A craniometrical point See CRANIOMETRY — sy̆m"phy-so-dac-tyl'i-a, n Pathol An abnormal union of the fingers sym'phy-tism, 1 sim'fı-tizm, 2 sy̆m'fy-tĭsm n Gram The coalescence of word-elements [< Gr symphytos, grown together]

sym'phy-tize, 1 sim'fı-taiz, 2 sy̆m'fy-tīz, vt [Rare] To grow together coalesce syn'o-nym, 1 sin'o-nim, 2 sĭn'o-nĭm, n. 1. A word having the same meaning as some other, more loosely, one of several words that have some one or more of nearly the same meanings, but that differ either in their other meanings or in the range of their application opposed to antonym Compare HETERONYM, HOMONYM, PARONYM Compare also synonyms for SYNONYMOUS Words of this class may often be used interchangeably, but discrimination in their choice is one of the most important characteristics of a good writer

Synonyms are . . . words of like significance in the main with a large extent of ground which they occupy in common but also with something of their own, private and peculiar, which they do not share with one another

TRENCH On the Study of Words lect vi, p 248 [E P & co 1888]

2. The equivalent of a word in another language, as, the German "haus" is the synonym of English "house" 3. Nat Hist A scientific name, as of a genus or species, superseded or discarded, as by the law of priority 4. Loosely, a thing resembling or involving another, as, a country curacy is a synonym of starvation [< F synonyme, < L synonymum, < Gr synōnymon, neut of synōnymos, see SYNONYMOUS] sy-non'y-mat [pl] syn'o-nyme† — sy-non'y-malt, a — sy-non'y-mal-ly†, adv — syn"o-nym'ic, a 1. Synonymous 2. Pertaining to synonymy syn"o-ny-mat'ic†; syn"o-nym'i-cal† — syn"o-nym'i-con, n A book of synonyms — sy-non'y-mist, n A collector and expounder of synonyms syn"o-nym'ics, 1 sin'o-nim'iks 2 sĭn'o-nĭm'ics, n Same as SYNONYMY [The state of being synonymous syn"o-nym'i-ty, 1 sin'o-nim'ı-t, 2 sĭn'o-nĭm'i-ty, n sy-non'y-mize, 1 si-non'ı-muz, 2 sy-nŏn'y-miz, vt [-MIZED, -MIZ'ING] To give the synonyms of, express by words of equivalent meaning sy-non'y-mise†.

sy-non'y-mous, 1 si-non'ı-mus, 2 sy-nŏn'y-mŭs, a 1. Being a synonym of some other word, being synonyms, as two or more words, of the nature of a synonym 2. Having a close relation to each other, as things, also, in a loose or extended sense, of the same purport, as statements or propositions 3. Having by merely a rhetorical attribution the same sense as some other word, as, the name of Washington is synonymous with patriotism 4 Synonymic [< Gr synōnymos, < syn, together, + onyma, name] Syn.: alike, correspondent, corresponding, equivalent, identical, interchangeable, like, same, similar, synonymic. In the strictest sense, synonymous words scarcely exist; rarely, if ever, are any two words in any language equivalent or identical in meaning, where a difference in meaning can not easily be shown, a difference in usage commonly exists, so that the words are not interchangeable By synonymous words we usually understand words that coincide or nearly coincide in some part of their meaning, and may hence within certain limits be used interchangeably, while outside of those limits they may differ very greatly in meaning and use It is the office of a work on synonyms to point out these correspondences and differences that language may have the flexibility that comes from freedom of selection within the common limits, with the perspicuity and precision that result from exact choice of the fittest word to express each shade of meaning outside of the common limits To consider synonymous words identical is fatal to accuracy, to forget that they are similar, to some extent equivalent, and sometimes interchangeable, is destructive of freedom and variety — sy-non'y-mous-ly, adv sy-non'y-my, 1 si-non'ı-mi, 2 sy-nŏn'y-my, n [-MIES, 1 -miz, 2 mis, pl] 1. The quality of being synonymous; sameness or likeness of meaning, the expressing of the same idea by different words 2. A system of synonyms, the systematic collection and study of synonyms, the use and nice discrimination of synonyms 3 A list or collection of synonyms, as in scientific nomenclature 4. Rhet Amplification by the use of synonyms [< F synonymie, < L synonymia, < Gr synōnymia, < synōnymos, see SYNONYMOUS] synop, abbr Synopsis

syn"oph-thal'mi-a, n Same as CYCLOPIA† syn"oph-thal'mus† — sy-noph'y-ty, n Zoöl The adhesion of two or more embryos in a seed sy-nop'sis, 1 si-nop'sis, 2 sy-nŏp'sis, n [-SES, 1 -siz, 2 -sēz, pl] 1. A general view, as of a subject or its treatment, a sketch or outline bringing all the heads of a subject in discourse under one view, an abstract, a syllabus or summary, hence, a collection, illustrating systematically in small compass a scientific group or department

I believe that the foundation and starting point of a vertebrate museum should be a synopsis of the entire branch B G WILDER in Proc A A A S vol xxxix p 270 [PUB BY SEC 1886]

2 Gr Ch A selection of prayers for lay use [LL, < Gr synopsis, see SYNOPTIC] Syn., see ABRIDGMENT — sy-nop'size, vt To make a synopsis of sy-nop'tic, 1 si-nop'tik, 2 sy-nŏp'tic, a 1. Of the nature of a synopsis, arranged for giving a general view, presenting the principal parts in brief or under one view 2. Containing parts that may be brought under the eye side by side as virtually identical said of the first three Gospels as distinguished from the fourth [< Gr synoptikos, < synopsis, synopsis, < syn, together, + opsis, view] sy-nop'ti-cal† — synoptic weather chart, a chart of any extended portion of the earth's surface on which are delineated the weather-conditions at different points observed at the same moment of actual time See WEATHER-CHART — sy-nop'ti-cal-ly, adv sy-nop'tic, n 1. A synoptic Gospel 2. A synoptist sy-nop'tist, 1 si-nop'tist, 2 sy-nŏp'tist, n 1. One who presents the main points of a topic in brief space 2 The writer of any one of the first three Gospels called synoptic Gospels, from their agreement in narrating nearly the same events in somewhat similar language and from a common point of view in distinction from John, who has his own peculiar facts method and point of view, also, any one of the Gospels so produced — sy-n"op-tis'tic, a sy-nor'chism, 1 si-nēr'kizm, 2 sy-nôr'cism, n Pathol Coalescence of the testicles, wholly or in part [< SYN- + Gr orchis, testicle] syn-os'te-o-, syn-ost'-, 1 sin-es'ti-o-, sin-ost'-, 2 sĭn-ŏs'te-o-, sĭn-ŏst'- From SYN- + OSTEO- combining forms — sy-n-os"te-og'ra-phy, n A description of bone-articulations — syn-os"te-ol'o-gy, n The branch of anatomy that treats of articulations — syn-os"te-o'sis, n Anat Union of different parts of the skeleton by means of bone, coössification a form of symphysis syn"os-to'sis†.

sy-no'ti-a, 1 si-nō'shi-ə 2 sy-nō shi-ə n A form of monstrosity in which the ears are united [< SYN- + Gr ous (ōt-) ear]—sy-not'ic, a —sy-no'tus, n A double monster united above the umbilicus, with the ears placed opposite to the face Sy-no'um, 1 si-nō'um, 2 sy-nō ŭm n Bot A small genus of Australian trees of the family Meliaceæ They have alternate odd-pinnate leaves and axillary flowers in racemes, the corolla having 4 ovate petals The capsule, which is 3-celled, contains 6 seeds S glandulosum is one of the Australian rosewoods [< SYN- + Gr -ōon egg] sy-nou'si-acs, 1 si-nū si-aks, 2 s -n i'si-ăcs, n That branch of knowledge pertaining to societies a term used in cataloging, as in libraries [< Gr synousia, society] sy-no'vi-a, 1 si-nō'vi-ə, 2 sy-nō'vi-a, n The albuminous fluid secreted by the synovial membranes in the interior of joints and in other places where lubrication of apposed surfaces is necessary [< SYN- + L ovum, egg] —sy·n"o-vec'to-my, n Surg The operation of cutting out a synovial membrane sy-no'vi-al, 1 si-nō'vi-əl, 2 sy-nō'vi-al, a Of, pertaining to, or producing synovia as, synovial glands —synovial capsule, the closed membranous sac in which is contained the synovia present in all freely movable joints —s fluid, same as SYNOVIA —s folds, fringes, or glands, folds of the synovial membrane projecting into a joint —s ligaments, large folds of synovial membrane that occur in some joints —s membrane, the connective tissue lining the interior of a joint-cavity and secreting the synovia —s sheath, the investment of synovial membrane formed about a tendon —sy-no'vi-al-ly, adv By means of the synovia sy-no"vi-a'lis, n [-LES pl] A synovial membrane —sy-no'vin, n A form of mucin occurring in the synovial fluid —syn"o-vip'a-rous, a Producing or secreting synovia —syn"o-vi'tis, n Inflammation of a synovial membrane —syn-pel'mous, a Same as SYMPELMOUS —syn"-sar-co'sis, n Same as SYSSARCOSIS —syn-sep'a-lous, a Bot Having united sepals, gamosepalous —sy·n'sperm-y, n Bot The union of two or more seeds normally free syn-tac'tic, 1 sin-tak'tik, 2 sy̆n-tăc'tic, a 1. Of or pertaining to syntax, relating to grammatical construction

A flow of talk full of topical and syntactical freedom HOWELLS Hazard of New Fortunes pt iv, p 107 [H 1890]
2†. Conjoined, fitted together [< Gr syntaxis (-tal-), syntax, < syn, together, + tassō, arrange] syn-tac'ti-cal† —syn-tac'ti-cal-ly, adv syn-tac'tic, n Math Those parts of mathematics, collectively, that treat of the number of ways of putting things together, as permutations and combinations syn-tag'ma, 1 sin-tag'mə, 2 sy̆n-tăg'ma, n [-MA-TA, pl] 1. An orderly arrangement, regular order

The Gospel is not a system of theology, nor a syntagma of theoretical propositions and conclusions
COLERIDGE Works, Aids to Reflection in vol i p 234 [H 1858]
2. A collection of anything, as of writings, music, etc; as, the Syntagma Musicum of Michael Prætorius 3. Bot Any body composed of tagmata See TAGMA [< Gr syntagma, something put together, < syn, together, + tassō, arrange] syn-tag'ma-tite, 1 sin-tag'mə-tait, 2 sy̆n-tăg'ma-tit, n Mineral The pure aluminous orthosilicate molecule, used to explain the composition of certain amphiboles [< Gr syntagma, see SYNTAGMA] syn'tax, 1 sin'taks, 2 sy̆n'tăks, n 1. Gram (1) The part of grammar that treats of the sentence and its construction Syntax embraces (a) the doctrine of the joining of words in the simple sentence, treating of their relations as elements of the sentence and subjects of concord and government (b) the doctrine of the joining of sentences in compound and complex sentences, treating of coordination and subordination and (c) the doctrine of the collocation of words and sentences in connected speech, treating of their arrangement and relative positions as required by grammatical connection, euphony, and clearness and energy of expression See CONSTRUCTION, GRAMMAR, SENTENCE, and the italicized words

(2) The construction of sentences by combining words in conformity with the rules or laws of any given language
2. In the Jesuit educational system, the fifth-year class in a seven-year course of classics 3†. Connected system or order [< F syntaxe, < LL syntaxis, < Gr syntaxis, see SYNTACTIC]

Syn'tax, Doc'tor. In Combe's Three Tours of Doctor Syntax, a simple pious, henpecked clergyman, who travels "in search of the picturesque, etc syn-tax'is, n 1 Anat A joint articulation 2† Syntax —sy·n-tech'nic, a Biol Denoting the similarity borne by some unallied animals to each other resulting from similar environment and lines of development —syn"te-cop'y-ra, n Hectic fever attended with emaciation syn-tec"ty-cop'y-ra ‡—syn-tec'tic, a Consumptive wasting syn-tec'ti-cal† —syn"te-no'sis, n Articulation by means of tendons as in the fingers and toes —syn"ter-e'sis, n 1 Med Prophylactic or preventive treatment while in health hygiene 2 Philos The inherent or instinctive perception of right and wrong in man which prompts him to act morally conscience —syn"ter-et'ic, a Relating to prophylactic or preventive treatment against disease —sy·n"ter-et'ics, n The doctrine and treatment for prevention of disease hygiene —syn-ter'is, n A decline of bodily tone a wasting away of the body consumption —sy·n'-theme, n Math A system of groups comprising every individual of another set taken any given number of times —syn'the-na, n A variety of epilepsy attended by burning pain of the stomach and griping of the bowels —syn-ther'mal, a Having the same temperature syn'the-sis, 1 sin'thi-sis, 2 sy̆n'the-sis, n 1. The putting together of different substances, elements, or parts into a new form, a constructing of something new out of existing materials either physical or mental, composition

To know involves two comprehensive acts the act of separation and the act of uniting or combining the parts into their wholes These acts are technically termed analysis and synthesis PORTER Human Intellect § 50 p 67 [s 1870]
2 Philol The combination of radical and formative elements into one word, in the formation of a language, as distinguished from analysis, which keeps them separate words 3. Psychol That mental activity of apprehending or grasping together the similarities of quality, states activities, etc, in which the essence of the more primitive or so called "psychological" judgments consists, also, less properly, the more passive or subconscious fusion of ideas and sensational or ideational elements
The word synthesis for this mental activity is employed and defended by Wundt who justly objects to the word 'association' and the theories which have used the word because of their concealment of the truth that the process imparts new properties to its product
G T LADD Elements of Phys Psych p 388 note [s 1887]
4. Logic (1) Combination of separate elements into a whole, as of species into genera, synthetic construction of knowledge (2) Specif, and in stricter use, a process of reasoning from the whole to a part, or from the general to the particular In this sense the word is used also in mathematics, where the chief use of synthesis is in the ordinary form of geometry See DEDUCTION, INDUCTION 5 Surg The operation of reuniting broken or divided parts either of the bones or of soft portions of the body (1) The union of divided parts remaining adjacent, as the synthesis of the edges of a wound or the fractured ends of a broken bone synthesis of continuity‡. (2) The reduction of displaced organs as, synthesis of hernia, falling womb etc synthesis of contiguity‡.
6. Chem The combination of elements or radicals in such proportions as to form compounds, specif, the preparation by artificial means of such compounds as, prior to 1828 (when Wöhler prepared urea artificially), were regarded as solely the product of natural processes, as, alizarin and indigo, formerly obtained only from plants, are now made by synthesis from coal-tar 7. Kantian Philos The organization of the manifold, as of the data of sense, under some a priori or unifying form of mental activity, as, the synthesis of what is sensuously given in varied ways under the concepts of space and time
The concept of connection includes besides the concept of the manifold and the synthesis of it the concept of the unity of the manifold also Connection is the synthetical unity of the manifold.
KANT Critique of Pure Reason tr by Max Müller, vol i p 433.
[L, < Gr synthesis, < syn, together, + tithēmi, place]
—synthesis of sound (Physics), the resultant vibration produced by the simultaneous action of individual notes of different pitches and intensities syn'the-sist, 1 sin'thi-sist, 2 sy̆n'the-sist, n One who proceeds by synthesis or synthetic methods syn'the-size, } 1 sin'thi-saiz, 2 sy̆n'the-siz, tt [-SIZED, syn'the-sise, } -SIZ'ING] To apply synthesis to, unite by synthesis sy·n'the-siz"er, 1 sin'thi-saiz'ər 2 sy̆n'the-siz'er, n Acoustics An instrument used for producing compound tones of a required composition syn-thet'ic, 1 sin-thet'ik, 2 sy̆n-thĕt'ic a 1. Pertaining to or of the nature of synthesis, characterized by or consisting in synthesis, specif, tending to reduce particulars to inclusive wholes, as, a synthetic mind or habit 2. Biol Denoting groups formed of members whose structural characters partake of the characteristics of other often antagonistic groups [< Gr synthetikos, < syn, together, + tithēmi, place] syn-thet'i-cal†.

The means which method has at command for the constructive or synthetic construction of knowledge are Definition DIVISION, and Deduction UEBERWEG Logic § 141 [L G & CO 1871] —synthetic division (Math), an abbreviated method of dividing one polynomial by another by using detached coefficients —s. judgment, in Kantian logic, a judgment in which the predicate adds an element not contained in the subject, as opposed to an analytic judgment s proposition‡.—s language, an inflectional language —s method, a method of deducing consequences from general principles —s philosophy, Spencerism so called by Spencer as being an attempt to combine all the sciences into a connected whole —syn-thet'i-cal-ly, adv syn-thet'i-cism, 1 sin-thet'i-sizm, 2 sy̆n-thĕt'i-çĭşm, n The observance of or tendency to synthetic methods syn'the-tism, 1 sin'thi-tizm 2 sy̆n'the-tiṣm n Surg The whole course of treatment to which a fracture is subjected syn"the-tis'mus, 1 sin"thi-tiz'mus, 2 sy̆n"the-tiṣ'mŭs, n Surg The whole process in setting a broken bone, including extension, counter-extension, coaptation of the fractured ends, and bandaging [< Gr synthetismos, < syn, together, + tithēmi, place]

sy·n'the-tist, syn'the-tize, etc Same as SYNTHESIST, etc
